This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.

+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.

+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.

+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

INTRODUCTION.

A critical edition of the Mahāvaṃsa was an old plan of mine, dating from the time when I first began to devote myself to the study of the language and history of Ceylon. I gave the plan up, when I heard, by chance, that Professor Hardy intended to edit the poem for the Pali Text Society. But I had, from that time, a lively correspondence with him about Mahāvaṃsa, and we came to the agreement that I should treat the literary questions connected with it, whilst he would confine himself in his future edition to a purely critical introduction. My book on „Dīpavaṃsa and Mahāvaṃsa", now also translated into English[1], was the fruit of my own studies. I may be allowed to refer to it, as I still believe that the results are on the whole correct and need no revisal in its essential parts. After Professor Hardy's premature and lamented death I felt obliged to return to my former plan. As I knew that Hardy had already begun to collect materials for his edition, I procured the manuscripts connected with the work that he was preparing, from the Royal Library at Berlin, where his literary remains are preserved. But it is a well known fact that a scholar's collectanea, although they might have been very useful to himself, hardly save any time or trouble to another scholar. Everybody has, of course, his peculiar intentions, and his peculiar method in the arrangement of scientific materials. Moreover I could not even find, among Hardy's collations, any explanation of the distinguishing marks used by him for the different manuscripts. I finally decided, therefore, to begin the work anew. For that reason I am entirely responsible for the whole with exception of the material taken from the Cambodian manuscript at Paris (C 2). This was the only MS., which I did not collate myself, but only had the use of a copy made from Hardy's transcript of the original.

I have now to express my thanks to the editor of the Pali text Society's publications, Prof. Rhys Davids, for all the kind and liberal assistance he has afforded me, and for the keen interest he has always taken in my plan; also to the principals of the India Office Library, of the Cambridge University Library, of the Royal Library at Copenhagen, and of the Colombo Museum Library for kindly lending me the MSS. which I needed for my task, and sending them to Erlangen. My special thanks are due to the German Imperial Consul at Colombo, Mr. Freudenberg, who kindly seconded my application for the loan of the very interesting Cambodian MS., kept in the Colombo Museum, and even personally guaranteed its safe return. Moreover I mention with sincere thanks Mr. Ernest L. Worman, who was kind enough, to collate for me Chapters 6 and 7 of Mah. in all the four MSS. kept in the University Library at Cambridge. His collation has clearly shown, that two of those MSS., viz. the MSS. No. 964 and 962 (= S 1 and S 3) were quite indispensable for my edition, whilst the remaining two MSS. No. 291 and No. 963 have no independent value, their text being the same as that of S 4, 5, 6 and of most of the MSS. which form the basis of the Colombo edition. Finally I am indebted to Professor Kuhn, who took the trouble to read one of the proofsheets and to give me, on this occasion, many useful hints.

Before entering now into the discussion of the critical questions I shall say a few words on the system adopted by me in transcribing the original text. As the spelling of the Pali words in all our MSS. is very careless and inconsistent it is necessary to normalize the orthography. The principal rules I have accepted are the following. I always put ṃ, not m or n, ñ at the end of word when it stands before vowels, or before labial or dental or palatal consonants. I therefore write taṃ āha, taṃ pi and not tam āha, tam pi; and taṃ ca, taṃ tathā not tañca, tan tathā. The method of spelling in our MSS. sometimes renders even the understanding of the text difficult. The passage 1. 13 has hitherto been misunderstood only owing to that inconsistent method. The Colombo edition alters vindantaṃ of the MSS. into vinditaṃ. But the sentence becomes quite clear and simple as soon as we transcribe vindaṃ taṃ and join the word taṃ to the following madhurattaṃ to form a compound instead of tassa madhurattaṃ. Now we have to translate: „The holy one, feeling (himself) the supreme beatitude of emancipation and displaying its sweetness (to the world), tarried there for seven weeks." I need not add that I retained the spelling m, where it is required by metre, as e. g. in tam eva ca at the end of a verse.

As to the use of ṃ in the middle of a word, I follow the rule adopted by Böhtlingk and Roth in their „Sanskrit Wörterbuch", writing always ṃ and not ṅ, ñ, n, m in a compound. I prefer, therefore, the spelling saṃgaṇhāti, alaṃkaroti, saṃjānāti, saṃdhāreti, saṃpajjati, and not saṅgaṇhāti, alaṅkaroti, sañjānāti, sandhāreti, sampajjati, and in the same manner in nouns alaṃkāro, saṃgāmo, saṃkhāro, saṃgho, saṃdeso, saṃdhi, saṃpatti, saṃbandho. The consequence is, that we must spell also saṃyato and not saññato, saṃñāṇaṃ and not saññāṇaṃ.

I come now to a question, which puzzled me for a very long time, that is the use of the apostrophe for the elision of a vowel. One can object, that the apostrophe introduces into the transcription a new element, which does not exist in the original alphabet, and that it would be, on this account, the best, to avoid the use of the apostrophe altogether. But on the other hand we cannot deny that the transcription itself introduces such new elements. Even the smallest use of punctuation is one of them, and we should only be allowed to put a full stop at the end of a sentence in prose texts, and at the end of a stanza in poems. Nay, the division of the single words is a new element, and we have seen above, that even the attempt to unify the ever varying orthography of the MSS. does sometimes go beyond the limits of a mere transliteration and become somewhat like an interpretation, of the original text. I finally resolved to admit the apostrophe, but to use it not too frequently, and in a manner which makes consistency possible. Besides I used it only in such cases, where the real elision of a vowel took place against the rules of Saṃdhi, as e. g. in p' eso instead of pi eso, c' ime instead of ca ime, dos' eso instead of doso eso, me 'nubhāvena instead of me ānubh°, tass' adā instead of tassa adā. But where a form of word must be taken or can be taken as the result of a saṃdhi, corresponding to the skr. Saṃdhi rules, although perhaps changed to suit the special Pali phonology, I rejected the apostrophe and joined the words to a compound, as e. g. ceme = ca ime, tassādā = tassa adā, taṃ ceva = taṃ ca eva, natthi = na atthi.

As the diphthong ai is unknown in the Pali language, neither is a long vowel admitted before a double consonant, we are able to derive such forms as ceva and natthi immediately from skr. caiva and nāsti. We have, of course, also to write iccāha = iti āha, tesveva = tesu eva &c. As the lengthening of a vowel seems to be only a special Pali form of Saṃdhi, I adopted the spelling gacchāti—or at the end of an oratio directa put in » « gacchā«ti—and gacchatūti (gacchatū«ti), just as gacchatīti = gaccha iti, gacchatu iti, gacchati iti. But I have always avoided the apostrophe at the beginning of ti, pi, va, as these words seem to have become new parallel forms of iti, api, iva, eva. I have simply written tāni pi, tesu pi, tadahe va, gaccha ti (gaccha« ti) &c.

I hope, that the method adopted in my edition will, at least, be found practicable, and I should be glad, if we could come to a generally accepted transcription of Pali texts on this base or on a similar one.

Finally I have to say a few words about the notes in my edition. There may be some readers who think they are too copious. But I beg them to take into consideration, that the edition is intended to be a critical one. Whosoever uses it must be able to control my own statements regarding the mutual relation of the MSS. From this point of view in fact mere mistakes and clerical errors are very often of special interest in that they give the key how to group the MSS. into different classes[1]. The number of the MSS., collated by myself, is not less than ten. Moreover I had to quote the readings of the Ṭīkā, those of the editions hitherto printed (together with the variants quoted in the notes of the Colombo edition), and those of the Pali works, connected with, or depending upon, the Mahāvaṃsa. I thought it also necessary not to omit the orthographical differences of the MSS., I hope, on the contrary, that my edition will be of some value for the solution of the various questions connected with Pali orthography. I trust, therefore, that the majority of my readers will approve of me having given somewhat amplified annotations.

I. DESCRIPTION OF THE MANUSCRIPTS.

My edition of the Mahāvaṃsa is based upon the following manuscripts:

1. MSS. written in Burmese characters (= X)[2].

1) B 1 = MS. of the India Office Library „Pali History 136“. Palm leaves. Nine lines on a page. A very fine MS., brought from Mandalay to London. See Journ. of the Pali Text Soc. 1896, p. 43. It contains 1. the Dīpavaṃsa, leaf ka to ṅū, 2. the older part of the Mahāvaṃsa (chap. 1 to chap. 37. 50), 109 leaves, leaf ṅē to ḍhē, and 3. the Mahābodhivaṃsa.

2) B 2 = MS. of the India Office Library „Pali History 137“. Palm leaves. Ten lines on a page. See Journ. of the Pali Text Soc. 1896, p. 44. The MS. is of the same character as B 1 and also brought from Mandalay. It contains 1. the older part of the Mahāvaṃsa (chap. 1 to chap. 37. 50), 79 leaves, leaf ka to chū, and 2. the Mahāvaṃsa-Ṭīkā.

[1] And if a new manuscript were discovered, it would still be easy to classify it under one of these groups.

[2] The Burmese MS. No. 296 of the Cambridge University Library, which was registered as a Mah. MS., proved to contain another text.

2. MSS. written in Sinhalese characters (= Y).

3) S 1 = MS. of the Cambridge University Library „MS. Add. No. 964". 184 palm leaves. Eight to ten, generally nine lines on a page. It contains the Mahāvaṃsa from chap. 1 to chap. 90. 47 of the Colombo Edition, the older part of the Mahāvaṃsa ending on leaf 69. From leaf 59 we find another handwriting. The MS. is, notwithstanding its high critical importance, full of clerical errors.

4) S 2 = MS. of the Royal Library at Copenhagen „XL. 18. Mahávanso 56". 129 palm leaves. Twelve lines on a page. It contains, like S 1, the Mahāvaṃsa from chap. 1 to chap. 90. 47, the older part of the Mahāvaṃsa ending on leaf 46. The MS. contains numerous corrections, apparently made by the first writer himself.

5) S 3 = MS. of the Cambridge University Library „MS. Add. No. 962". 241 palm leaves. Nine lines on a page. The last stanza of the MS. corresponds to the verse chap. 100. 296 cd—297 ab of the Colombo Edition. The older part of the Mahāvaṃsa ends on leaf 74. S 3 has also numerous corrections throughout.

6) S 4 = MS. of the India Office Library „Ceylon MSS. P. C. No. 91 (121)". 118 palm leaves. Ten lines on a page. It contains the Mahāvaṃsa from chap. 1 to chap. 90. 102. The older part of the Mahāvaṃsa ends on leaf 43.

7) S 5 = MS. of the India Office Library „Ceylon MSS. P. C. No. 92 (122)". 85 palm leaves. Seven lines on a page. The stanzas are not written continuously as in the other MSS., but each page is divided into three columns and the hemistichs stand one below the other. The older part of the Mahāvaṃsa ends on leaf 73. The last stanza of the MS. corresponds to chap. 42. 30 of the Colombo edition.

8) S 6 = MS. of the India Office Library „Ceylon MSS. P. C. No. 93. 1 (123)". 98 palm leaves. Generally nine lines on a page. It contains the Mahāvaṃsa from chap. 1 to chap. 58. 11 of the Colombo edition. But two leaves (ka and kā) are added, containing a summary of the chapters 1 to 99. This summary, therefore, extends also to a second part of the MS., comprising the leaves chi to ṭhaṃ. The older part of the Mahāvaṃsa ends on leaf 61 of the MS. S 6. The MS. S 6 contains also many corrections. These corrections were added when the writer of the MS. had already finished his work. This appears from the fact that the corrections are not blackened like the remainder of the MS.

3. MSS. written in Cambodian characters (= Z).

9) C 1 = MS. belonging to the Colombo Museum, Ceylon. 308 palm leaves. Five lines on a page. One set of leaves, ṇa to taḥ, is missing. The missing leaves contain the passage from the middle of chap. 22 to the beginning of chap. 25.

10) C 2 = Copy of a collation and transcript, made by the late Prof. Hardy from the Cambodian Mahāvaṃsa MS. „fonds Pali No. 632" of the National Library at Paris.

Both the Cambodian MSS. contain the enlarged text of the Mahāvaṃsa, which was first detected by Prof. Hardy in the Paris MS. mentioned in 10.[1], and which was compiled by a Siamese monk, called Moggallāna. The same text is found in a third Cambodian MS., kept now in the Colombo Museum Library, as I conclude from a letter, which my venerated friend, the high priest Subhuti, wrote to me from Waskaḍuwa 20th November 1905. We have, therefore, reason to assume, that all Cambodian MSS. show the enlarged text of our poem which we may call the Cambodian Mahāvaṃsa.

With regard to C 2, Prof. Hardy has fully transcribed only those passages from the Paris MS., which do not belong to the original Mahāvaṃsa, but were added by Moggallāna, and he merely collated those passages, which are identical with the old text. But in his collations he apparently disregarded the minor differences. One should not forthwith assume, when in my notes only a reading of C 1 is mentioned, that in these cases C 2 always agrees with the other MSS.

4. Corrections in our Manuscripts.

Three of the MSS., described above, are systematically corrected according to another source, to wit the MS. S 2, 3, 6. The corrections in S 2 and S 3 are taken, as I may mention in advance, from a MS., which must have been very similar to S 1; those in S 6 are taken from S 5. Occasional corrections occur also in the rest of the MSS., but they have no essential importance. I have marked those corrections in my edition by S 2^2, S 3^2, S 6^2, and in contradistinction to them, the original readings by S 2 or., 3 or., 6 or.

II. SECONDARY CRITICAL MATERIALS.

1) Ṭ = Maháwaṇsa Tíká or Waṇsatthappakásiní, revised and edited, under Order of the Ceylon Government, by Pandit Baṭuwantuḍawe and M. Ñáṇissara Bhikshu. Colombo 1895.

The critical value of this old Mahāvaṃsa Commentary is by no means insignificant, as I shall afterwards show in detail. As the Ṭīkā was composed between 1000 and 1250 A. D.[1], its quotations from the Mahāvaṃsa represent a form of text, which is several centuries older than that of our oldest MSS. But the Ṭīkā is, of course, only a fragmentary source of criticism, as it does not comment upon every word of the original text. Where, in the critical notes of my edition, in any list of various readings the „Ṭ“ is missing, we may assume that the word or passage in question is not quoted in the Ṭīkā. There are also many instances, where we are able to draw a conclusion from the paraphrase of a Mahāvaṃsa passage, given in the Ṭīkā, as to what the original reading was. In such cases I have added the word „probably“ after the abbreviation „Ṭ“. I have done the same, where I thought it necessary to emend the text of the printed edition of the Ṭīkā.

2) As a guide, which must not be overlooked in fixing the Mahāvaṃsa text, I have finally to mention the quotations and parallel passages in other works of the historical literature of Ceylon. The following works come into consideration here: a) Dīp. = Dīpavaṃsa, ed. OLDENBERG, London 1879. The Dīp. contains many stanzas which are also found in the Mahāvaṃsa[1]. It is often very useful to determine the correct spelling of proper names, when the various groups of the Mah. MSS. differ one from the other. See Mah. 2. 4 a; 2. 12 d; 5. 7 c; 5. 206 c; 6. 45 d; 15. 78 c; 15. 92 a; 33. 14 d; 34. 28 c; 35. 5 a; 35. 9 a; 35. 84 a; 36. 4 c; 36. 18 d. It confirms the reading of the Burmese MSS. in 14. 44 b and 33. 100 b; that of the Ṭīkā in 11. 31 d.

b) Smp. = The Historical Introduction to Buddhaghosa's Samanta Pāsādikā ed. OLDENBERG (The Vinaya Piṭakaṃ III, p. 281). The readings of the Smp. generally agree with those of X, i. e. the Burmese group of MSS. (as in 3. 39 a; 5. 27; 11. 28 c; 11. 34 c; 13. 15 d; 14. 48 d; 17. 1 c; 18. 38 a), occasionally with those of Y, i. e. the Sinhalese group (as in 3. 37 a, 12. 16 d). It differs from the Ṭīkā in 19. 27 c.

I quote here especially two passages, where Smp. confirms the correct reading in contrast to the text accepted in the Colombo edition. In 5. 73 X and Z have anupubbena vaḍḍhayi, but the Colombo edition has anupubben' upaṭṭhahi with Y. The meaning must be this: the king gradually increased the number of the monks maintained in his house, until they were sixty thousand. Even the word anupubbena requires a verb like vaḍḍheti. The text of X, Z is supported by Smp. 303. 22 et seq., where we find the phrase divase divase vaḍḍhāpetvā.

In 19. 64 b the Colombo edition has patiṭṭhitā instead of patiṭṭhite or -to in the MSS. The editors join patiṭṭhitā with bodhilaṭṭhiyo in 63, and WIJESINGHA[2] translates according to this emendation the passage thus: „Thirty-two bodhi plants, produced from four other fruits, planted themselves in the several viháras throughout the island at a distance of a yójana each, by virtue of the glory of Buddha inherent in the bodhi tree". But the emendation is superfluous, in fact directly false. The word bodhilaṭṭhiyo too depends on patiṭṭhāpesuṃ in 60, and at the end of 63 we have a full stop. The new sentence begins with 64: „When thus the bodhi tree was planted for the benefit of the islanders by the glory of the holy Buddha, Anulā became nun &c. &c." The Smp. confirms again the text given in my edition. It has (340. 16 et seq.): Tato ekaṃ bodhirukkhaṃ āgamanakāle mahābodhinā paṭhamapatiṭṭhitokāse Jambukolapaṭṭane ropayiṃsu, .... (= 61, 62 a b) .... ekaṃ Rohaṇajanapadamhi yeva Candanagāme. Itaresaṃ catunnaṃ phalānaṃ bījehi dvattiṃsabodhitaruṇe yojaniyayojaniyesu ārāmesu patiṭṭhāpesuṃ. Evaṃ puttanattaparaṃparāya samantādīpavāsīnaṃ hitāya sukhāya patiṭṭhite dasabalassa dhammadhajabhūte mahābodhimhi Anulā devī .... pabbajitvā na cirasseva saparivārā arahatte patiṭṭhāsi.

[1] See GEIGER, Dīp. und Mah., p. 15, note 2 and 3; p. 16, note 1 (p. 15).

c) Thūp. = Thūpavaṃsa (in Pali) ed. by DHAMMARATANA, (Colombo) 1896. By SThūp. the Sinhalese version of the work is meant (ed. DHAMMARATANA, 1889). The Thūp. was compiled about the middle of the 13th century A. D. Its readings agree also more frequently with those of X (as in 5. 27; 14. 48 d; 25. 71 a; 26. 8 a; 26. 24; 30. 9 b; 31. 71 d; 32. 75 c) and of the Ṭīkā (as in 26. 8 b; 30. 51 a; 31. 83 d), than with those of Y (as in 28. 13 c; 29. 11 b and 12 b; 31. 80 b; 32. 57 c)[1]. The correct spelling of proper names can be made out by its help in 25. 11 et seq.; 25. 80 b; 28. 18 c; 29. 39 a; 31. 4 b; 31. 27 c. In 30. 66 c the Thūp. alone has the reading suvaṇṇaghaṇṭāpantī (64. 30), which appears to be the correct one.

d) MBv. = Mahābodhivaṃsa ed. by STRONG, Pali Text Society 1891. It confirms readings of the Burmese MSS. (as in 14. 65 a; 19. 38 d) and of the Ṭīkā (as in 17. 65 c).

[1] It confirms no doubt the correctness of amāpayi in Y in 31. 85 d, in contrast to the reading adhārayi in X; but in 32. 5 a it proves that naḷakārehi in X is preferable to chattakārehi in Y.

The MBv. was compiled, I believe, in the last quarter of the 10th century A. D.

e) Rasav. = Rasavāhinī ed. by Vedeha Maha Thera, Colombo 1901. It is quoted in 23. 82, 84, 91.

f) Sās. = Sāsanavaṃsa, ed. by Bode, PTS. 1897. It is quoted in 5. 4 et seq.

III. EDITIONS.

1) E 1 = The Mahâwanso in Roman Characters with the Translation Subjoined, and an Introductory Essay on Pali Buddhistical Literature. Vol. I containing the first thirty eight Chapters. By the Hon. George Turnour, C. C. S. Ceylon 1837.

2) E 2 = The Mahâwaṇsa from first to thirty-sixth Chapter. Revised and edited, under Orders of the Ceylon Government by H. Sumangala, High Priest of Adam's Peak, and Don Andris de Silva Batuwantudawa, Pandit. Colombo 1883.

Turnour's edition is based on a MS., which belongs to the same class as the MSS. S 5, 6. In the Colombo edition use is made of six Sinhalese MSS., and occasionaly of one Cambodian MS. I have given the different readings of the Sinhalese MSS., marked in my edition as s 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, according to the foot-notes in E 2. But I have omitted to add the readings of the „Kamboja potthaka". For I am inclined to believe that it is identical with the MS. C 1. I have arrived at this conclusion through the fact that the quotations from the „Kamboja potthaka" cease at verse 22. 42, which is just where the lacuna in C 1 begins.

IV. ORTHOGRAPHICAL PECULIARITIES IN THE MSS.

In all the MSS. the distinction between i and ī, u and ū, n and ṇ, l and ḷ is shown in a very careless manner. It was, of course, quite impossible to notice all these trifles. There is also much inconsistency in the use of the Anusvāra. We find tampi, tañca, tanti as well as taṃ pi, taṃ ca, taṃ ti; saṅkamati, sandeso &c. as well as saṃkamati, saṃdeso &c. My own method of spelling has been mentioned above.

But the single groups of MSS. have also their special orthographical peculiarities. In a hiatus the Burmese MSS. (= X) and the Cambodian MSS. (= Z) frequently elide the second vowel, whilst the Sinhalese MSS. (= Y) elide the first one. X Z has aṭṭha vassāni 'tikkamuṃ, Y aṭṭha vassān' atikkamuṃ (4. 3 d). X Z: tāni 'dā, Y: tān' adā (5. 70 d). X Z: hatthissa·, Y: hatthassa· (7. 56 c, 25. 81 c). But also X bhikkhuṇupassayaṃ (18. 11; 34. 36) in contrast to Y bhikkhuṇipassayaṃ. For the main part we can say that the orthographies in X and Z resemble one another more than either of them resembles Y.

I will now cite a list of orthographical differencies, which occur more or less regularly in the three groups of MSS.:

Finally in the Burmese MSS. one very often finds in the gerund the causal form of a verbe, where it is not justified by the meaning: bhāsetvā (14. 65 c), nivattetvā (17. 28 c), nikkhametvā (17. 29 d), pavīsetvā (22. 72 a), pabbajetvā (19. 66 c), nimminetvāna (18. 26 c).

There are still some minor orthographical peculiarities, which I could not always enumerate in the notes. In the Burmese MSS. the Anusvāra is often omitted, they have both pācino, sajjakaṃ, sāyanho, pavīsati &c. In B 2 occur cetīyaṃ, pīyo, pūraṃ, pūriso, pūrimo &c. In the Sinhalese MSS. the false Anusvāra is frequently used; e. g. raṃño, suttaṃtaṃ &c. They often have — with the exception of S 5 — ddh instead of ṭṭ, as in the word paddhanaṃ in lieu of paṭṭanaṃ. The forms nāṅgo, naṅgaraṃ frequently occur in lieu of nāgo, nagaraṃ, especially in the MSS. S 5 and S 6.

V. TEXTUAL CRITICISM.[1]

1. The Cambodian MSS.

Among the Mahāvaṃsa MSS. those of the Cambodian group (Z) have, no doubt, only a limited critical value. They occupy, indeed, quite a peculiar position and belong rather to the secondary than to the primary material. We can not state the exact date, when the Cambodian Mahāvaṃsa was written. But we are able to prove that its author made use of different sources in compiling his work. He took long passages from the old Mahāvaṃsa, he added many episodes — some comprising only single verses, others many hundreds of stanzas — from the Ṭīkā, or the Smp., or the Thūp. He sometimes freely altered the original according to his own taste.

It is therefore obvious that Z does not come into consideration as a critical guide at all, except in those passages which are taken word for word from the original. Where the Cambodian text bears the character of a paraphrase of the old Mahāvaṃsa we must go to work very cautiously, when using it for critical purposes[1]. But on the whole we can say, that the author of the Cambodian recension had a Mahāvaṃsa text before him, which was very similar to that of the Burmese MSS. Wherever X differs from Y, the readings of Z agree with those of the former group, and not with Y. There are exceptions, of course, but as a rule, this statement holds good. From the first ten chapters of the Mah. I have compared fourty four typical passages. In thirty six of them Z agrees with X, and with Y in only eight.

[1] The subject was already treated by Snyder in his valuable dissertation „Der Commentar und die Textüberlieferung des Mahāvaṃsa", Berlin 1891. But it requires new investigation, as Snyder did not know the MSS. S 1—3, nor the Cambodian recension. Snyder calls his two Burmese MSS. N (= B 1) and D (= B 2) and his three Sinhalese MSS. P (= S 4), Q (= S 5) and R (= S 6).

In some of these eight passages (as e. g. in 5. 56 a, 5. 198 d; 5. 255 a) we may assume a mere corruption in the archetype of B 1, 2, whilst the MS., which Moggallāna had at his disposal was more correct. The same may be the case in 5. 234—235. Z has here as well as Y the two hemistichs tesaṃ kātuṃ to sabbārāmesu bhikkhavo, and their genuineness is also confirmed by the Ṭīkā. I believe that the omission in B 1, 2 can be easily explained by a mistake in the archetype, probably the writer's eye slipping from the word bhikkhavo in 234 b to the same word in 235 b. Other passages, however, show us that Moggallāna knew and sometimes even used the Sinhalese recension besides the Burmese, as e. g. in 1. 50 b, which will be discussed afterwards, or in 6. 45 d, where it shares with Y the form of name Mahindadīpa instead of Mahilādīpa, which is, no doubt, correct. In 8. 23 d Z has siṃghavā or siṃghaṃ vā in agreement with Y, in place of the correct sīghagā in X, Ṭ, and in 4. 30 c both, Y and Z, have the word sissa, which, I believe, has crept into the text from a gloss[2]. The occasional use of a Sinhalese MS. by

[1] For that reason I have generally noticed the different readings of C 1, 2 only in such cases, where they serve to confirm or to disprove the readings of any Burmese or Sinhalese MS., but I have disregarded them, where they seem to be Moggallāna's own alterations of the original Mahāvaṃsa.

[2] See also 14. 32 b; 36. 25 b, 62 d; 37. 9 c &c. and other passages, where Z agrees with Y.

Moggallāna is in accord with the eclectic character of his whole work.

The Sinhalese MS., which Moggallāna used, belonged, it seems, to the same class as S 5 and 6. I conclude this from passages like 5. 104 d, where C 2, S 5 and 6 alone read dve te saddhivihārikā in contrast to all the remaining MSS. of both the Burmese and the Sinhalese group.[1] The same close connection of Z with S 5, 6 appears from the difficult passage 10. 10, where Z alone together with S 5, 6 has three hemistichs instead of two.

The relation which seems to exist between the Cambodian recension and the Ṭīkā will be discussed in the next chapter.

2. The Ṭīkā.

Examining the readings, contained in the Ṭīkā, we may state the following facts.

1) A glance into the notes of my edition will at once show that the readings of Ṭ generally agree with those of the MSS. B 1 and B 2. The text, on which the commentary is based, was, therefore, very similar to that of the Burmese recension.

2) On the other hand it is not lacking in such passages, although they are not so numerous, where Ṭ corresponds with the Sinhalese and not with the Burmese recension.

3) There are, finally, some passages, where Ṭ has readings, which differ from both recensions.

Concerning the first of these facts I shall afterwards enter into full particulars, when I have to speak about the Burmese MSS. and their critical value. But I may here premise that, wherever Ṭ agrees with X, its text is generally better than that of Y i. e. the Sinhalese recension. This fact alone sufficiently shows the importance of Ṭ for textual criticism. We sometimes meet verses in all our MSS. of both recensions, which are not commented upon in Ṭ. There are, of course, such verses among them, which are passed over in silence by the commentator, simply because they require no explanation. But in other cases we expect some explanatory words, and the silence of the commentator is surprising. The genuineness of such verses is always suspected to a certain degree. In chap. 30 the whole passage from stanza 42 to stanza 50 is omitted in Ṭ, and it looks indeed like an addition of younger origin, although I hesitated to exclude it against the authority of our MSS. But even single readings in Ṭ, which do not agree either with the Burmese or with the Sinhalese recension, are generally worthy of consideration and often recommend themselves as correct for intrinsic reasons.

[1] See also 5. 207 c, where Mahindo so is found in S 5, 6, Z; mahāsatto in X, Ṭ, whilst S 3 or., 4 have a lacuna.

11. 28 c: Ṭ alone has the word vaṭaṃsaṃ, which is missing in CHILDERS' Dictionary, but which is confirmed by Smp. 322. 23, Thūp. 17. 23. The commentary explains it by kaṇṇapilandhanaṃ.

17. 6 c: The reading uposathī „keeping the Uposatha vows" is apparently correct. uposathī is synonymous with uposathiko. It occurs also Mah. 36. 84. In X and Y the word is corrupted to uposatho or uposathe.

23. 72 b: hesitaṃ akā „(the horse) neighed (out of pleasure)" is, no doubt, the correct reading. We easily understand how this rare word could be changed into the frequent hasitaṃ in X and Y.

9. 22—23. Ṭ has the readings nissayā in 22 c and adente in 23 a, which alone give a good sense. The literal translation of the passage is this: „Fearing the two adherents of Gāmaṇī, the cowherd Citta and the slave Kālavela (thinking): „they were accomplices in the work", they put them to death, because they did not give a promise (to fulfill the orders of the brothers)".

10. 106 a b. The reading of Ṭ sattatiṃsavasso 'dhigamma can alone be correct. X Y have the unintelligible mistake ·vassādhigamma.

8. 26 b: We have without doubt to read with Ṭ: tatthāgatā tu tā | disvā or tattha gatā tu tā | disvā „the minister having heard the fortune-teller's word and having seen those women who had arrived, having also made inquiries and having recognised the women, presented them to the king". E 2 has also adopted the reading of Ṭ. sutā in B 2, and tathā in Y are mere corruptions of tu tā.

36. 133 c: The correct reading is evidently madhuram iva visena missam annaṃ, as the Ṭ has. E 2 has justly adopted it. X, S 5 have missamānaṃ, the other MSS. of Y missapannaṃ and Z missajanaṃ.

Other instances, where the text of Ṭ appears to be preferable, are 4. 12 a (Ṭ: chaḷabhiññābalapatto in contrast to chaḷabhiñño balapatto); 5. 21 c (Ṭ: sāṭṭhārasaṃ = sa-aṭṭh·); 8. 28 c (Ṭ: padāya in contrast to padāsi); 18. 3 b (Ṭ: niyojayaṃ); 23. 42 a (Ṭ: paricchadaṃ); 31. 12 d (Ṭ: Gaṅgam oggato instead of the insignificant Gaṅgam āgato); 37. 2 a (Ṭ: rajjābhisekan taṃ) &c. I believe also, that Ṭ is right in 5. 72 d. Its reading samahājanaṃ seems to be more plausible than that of Y ca mahājanaṃ, which would stand in lieu of mahājanaṃ ca. That of X pavesesi mahājanaṃ is undoubtedly wrong, as we have already in pāda b the object bhūpatiṃ.

In 10. 53 d the Ṭ clearly shows that valavāmukhī was an old gloss, paraphrasing or interpreting the word valavārūpā in pāda c. The gloss crept into the text and crowded out the last word Cetiyanāmikā in the common archetype of X Y. The MS. S 5 seems perhaps to disprove my hypothesis. But SNYDER[1] has already shown, and we will return to the subject below, that S 5 has many readings, which are purely conjectural, and that it often tries to improve the text with the help of the Ṭīkā. This, I believe, is also the case in the passage in question[2].

We may see from the passages, quoted above, that the authority of the Ṭ is by no means to be disregarded. There is still a number of passages, where the isolated readings of Ṭ,—although I have hesitated to embody them in my text —are at least worthy of consideration. I mention here e. g.

[1] Der Commentar und die Textüberlieferung des Mahāvaṃsa p. 38 et seq.

[2] The Ṭ has also the correct reading in 1. 54 b as well as S 3.

23. 85 d (Ṭ: taṃ savaṃsāgataṃ in line of tassa vaṃs·), 29. 3 d (Ṭ: cuṇṇīkate in lieu of cuṇṇite), 34. 36 a (Ṭ: kulāyatte), 35. 22 b (Ṭ: sāmī te in lieu of sāmīko), 37. 20 a (Ṭ: sāduṃ in lieu of sādhu).

In 34. 44 b Ṭ has yāva dhuracchattorucetiyaṃ i. e. yāva dhuracchattā Urucetiyaṃ. This can be taken as the original reading. For it is perhaps easier to explain the readings in X ·cchattā va c· and in Y ·cchatto(!) va c· as corruptions from that of Ṭ, than the contrary.

It is remarkable that in a number of those passages, where Ṭ differs from both X and Y, as for instance in 5. 72 d, 8. 26 b, 10. 106 b, 11. 28 c, 15. 12 d, 17. 6 c and 27 c, 18. 33 c, 28. 44 a, 34. 44 b, the Cambodian recension Z has the same reading as Ṭ. This admits of a double explanation. We have either to assume that Moggallāna used a MS., which was sometimes more correct than the archetypes of X and Y, and which approached nearer to the text upon which the Ṭīkā is based. Or we must admit the possibility that the author of the Cambodian Mahāvaṃsa, who undoubtedly knew the Ṭīkā, took those readings directly from that source.

Now we procede to those passages where Ṭ agrees with Y and differs from X. In some of them we have no objective criteria in favour of either of the two different readings, and both must be admitted as possible. But in many cases, where we are able to decide the alternative from convincing reasons, we see that the greater probability of genuineness is on the side of Y, confirmed by Ṭ. And this leads us to a general critical principle of high importance. The concordance with or divergence from, the Ṭīkā is decisive in favour of or against any reading in X or Y.

The meaning must be: the deva Samiddhisumana was a man in his last (anantara = immediately preceding) existence. We have, therefore, to read manusso 'nantare bhave ahosi. In 30. 51 a, 56 c, 60 a; 33. 22 b the word pupphādhāna gives at least a satisfactory sense, ādhāna being as in Skr. a place where anything is laid down. The pupphaṭṭhāna in X looks like a paraphrase, pupphayāna in Y is less good, although not impossible. The Thūp. has pupphadhāna.

This rule may have some exceptions, but it will certainly hold good in the great majority of cases.

I have collected about one hundred typical passages, from chap. XI to chap. XXXVII, where Ṭ agrees with Y. In eleven only of them we are inclined to decide in favour of X against YṬ, twenty five do not allow of an exact decision, referring to the remaining passages we can say with certainty, or at least with great probability that YṬ is right and X wrong. The figures may not be incontestable, as the choice of what I call typical passages is to a certain degree arbitrary, but the proportion would hardly change. The number of those eleven passages, where the reading of X is preferable to that of YṬ, will even become fewer, as the text of the printed edition of the Ṭīkā sometimes appears to be incorrect owing to the influence of the Colombo edition of the Mahāvaṃsa. In 31. 14 d, for instance, we have to read with X pahū ānayituṃ siyaṃ. The interesting but rare form siyaṃ = skr. syām has been corrupted to sayaṃ in Y. The edition of Ṭ has also sayaṃ, but I am sure, that we must read siyaṃ, as the word is commented upon by bhaveyyaṃ.

I quote now some of the cases, where YṬ is undoubtedly right and X wrong.

19. 80 c d. The text in X gantvā taṃ tattha vandiya saṃmodi theriyā saha is clear and simple, and seems at first sight to be preferable to that of Y. But the latter corresponds better to the situation. The king Devānaṃpiyatissa goes to the nunnery to visit Saṃghamittā. But she had gone to the kadamba grove in order to enjoy the day in solitude. The king, having heard this, repairs himself to that place to pay there his respects to the therī. This is expressed by the double gantvā in the text of YṬ. The corruption in X can be easily explained if we assume, that the missing words between the two gantvā escaped the copyist's observation. The verse, which thus became fragmentary, was afterwards conjecturally completed by inserting the words saṃmodi theriyā saha. If we took the text of X as the original one, we should find it hard to understand how it could be corrupted to the somewhat quaint text of Y.

The reading sandhiṃ of Y Ṭ in 9. 16 d is evidently right, that of X Z, saddhiṃ, being a mere clerical error. In 11. 31 d amatosadhaṃ in S 3—6, Ṭ is confirmed by Dīp. and Smp., although even the reading of X, S 1, 2 agadosadhaṃ would give a good sense. In 20. 14 a the reading in Y Ṭ issarehi is no doubt correct, and the same is the case with pāṭikaṃ in 31. 61 c and with kāmayi in 33. 3 d in contrast to pādikaṃ and kārayi.

In 15. 202—205 the text of X, after the necessary corrections, runs thus:

Taṃ Mahānandanavanaṃ vuccate tena tādinā |
sāsanajotitaṭṭhānaṃ āsi so tena taṃ tahiṃ ‖
āditukkāya kāresi sukkhāpetvāna mattikaṃ |
pāsādo kālakābhāso so tenāsi tahiṃ pana ‖
Kālapāsādapariveṇaṃ &c. = 204 c d, 205 a b c d.

The first glance reveals, that in this form the verses can not be correct. The principal point, the new name of the Mahānandana garden, is entirely wanting, nor has the verb kāresi its necessary object. It is clear, that the words āsi so tena taṃ tahiṃ are not in their right place and must have displaced another pāda. Moreover we are compelled to join the line Kālapāsādapariveṇaṃ with the following two lines to one stanza. The result would be a śloka of six pādas. I believe, however, that such stanzas are not admitted by Mahānāma. We observe in the poem throughout, that the four pādas of the stanza are treated by the author as a unit. The sentences end with the fourth pāda even if they extend over two or more stanzas. This is the general rule in the whole Mahāvaṃsa, and we may boldly say, that, where this rule seems to be broken, either a genuine line of the original text has been lost, or a spurious verse has crept into it.

Thus e. g. in the Colombo edition in chap. 5 from stanza 152 (= 150 of my edition) the text begins to break away from this construction. After this the ends of the sentences and the ends of the stanzas do not correspond any more. Therefore the editors, who proceeded mechanically with the usual arrangement of stanzas, found themselves at the end of the chapter with an odd line, and to overcome this difficulty, they made a stanza of three lines here. But in the Sinhalese MSS., upon which the Colombo edition is based, two pādas corresponding to the line 150 c d of my edition, have been lost. After their insertion all difficulty disappears. The omission of the line in the Sinhalese archetype can be easily explained by the fact that the pādas b and d of 150 end both with the same word uggahaṃ. Even the Ṭīkā confirms the genuineness of 150 c d, for it comments upon the words so tatthākā taduggahaṃ.

I have met only three instances, where a stanza of six pādas seems to be supported by the authority of the MSS. These few exceptions are not sufficient, I think, to disprove the general rule, and we are entitled, in these cases, to put the text in order by emendation. I have done so in the first of those three passages (28. 32 et seq.) by inserting the hemistich añjasā iminā &c., which is found in the Cambodian recension and confirmed by the Thūpavaṃsa[1]. In the second passage (33. 42 et seq.) I have excluded three lines, which follow in the MSS. the stanza 42. They seem to be spurious and to contain the versification of an old gloss or of a notice in the Aṭṭhakathā, which was intended to describe the locality of the event more exactly. The third passage (34. 26) can be easily emended, as I have done in my edition, by leaving out the line dvattiṃsāya balatthehi vatthukāmā yathāruci, which displays all the characteristics of a spurious verse.

We have seen, therefore, that the text of X in 15. 202 et seq. is certainly wrong, and we will accept, without hesitation, that of Y. It is also the text of Ṭ, and the paraphrase in Z corresponds with it exactly:

Evaṃ hi Nandanavanaṃ jotiṭṭhānassa sāsanaṃ |
pātubhāvaṃ pi teneva nāmaṃ Jotivanaṃ labhi. ||
Kārāpetvā vihāraṃ so Jotivane manorame, |

[1] The agreement of Z with Thūp. must, however, not be overestimated. It is possible, of course, that the hemistich in Z is nothing else than a versification of the corresponding words in Thūp. 56. 9: iminā maggena gaccha upāsika. The insertion of the line añjasā iminā is one, but not the only possible method of emending the text.

Tissārāmo ti nāmena vihāro vissuto ahu, ‖
udakaṃ ākiri hatthe adā therassa ādito. |
Mattikaṃ daṇḍaṃ ukkāya sukkhāpetvāna bhūpati |
Tissārāmamhi pāsādaṃ sīghaṃ kārāpayī tato. ‖
Pāsādo kālakobhāso Lohapāsādasādiso |
Kālapāsādapariveṇaṃ iti &c.

It would be easy to multiply the quotations, where Y Ṭ have a better text than X. But the passages spoken about will sufficiently prove the high critical value of Ṭ. Where it agrees with X, the readings of X are generally preferable to those of Y, and in the much fewer cases, where Ṭ has the same reading as Y, we are entitled to say, that in such passages X is corrupt and Y correct.

The Ṭīkā is, however, not infallible. Even at the time of its composition the text of the Mah. was by no means free of faults. This appears from the fact that sometimes Ṭ itself quotes various readings. In 1. 13 c the Ṭ mentions the readings vindanto madhurattaṃ ca or vindattaṃ m°. Both are wrong. I have shown above (p. III) that the difficulty can be removed in a very easy manner. Various readings are also quoted in 1. 34 b (nīlāmalasiroruhe or °ruho), 1. 58 c (tamonudo or tamanudo), 3. 30 d (dhuraṃdharā or °dhare), 22. 43 a (vāmantarena or vāmetarena), 36. 101 d (cassa kārayi or cassu kārayi).

An exceedingly difficult passage is 24. 35, and the MSS. as well as the Ṭ show clearly, that at an early date the text was confused and its interpretation merely conjectural. The Ṭ recognises the readings hatthinaṃ and hatthino. It takes hatthinaṃ to be hatthiṃ naṃ (with the note niggahītalopaṃ ti daṭṭhabbaṃ) and hatthino bhātikopari as equal to hatthibhātikānaṃ upari. In the pādas cd it reads cammaṃ va yathā chādeti[1] piṭṭhiyaṃ or vammaṃ ca yathā chindati piṭṭhiyaṃ

[1] The word chādeti is not explicitly given in Ṭ. I infer it from the paraphrase paṭicchādetuṃ sakkoti. I have adopted the reading chindati, although it is rejected by Ṭ, and I believe, that it has the meaning of a Subjunctive. The commentary of the whole passage is not easy to understand in all its details. I have the impression, that the author of Ṭ was puzzled himself by the difficulty of the text.

and dismisses the latter with the remark taṃ na sundaraṃ, ubhinnaṃ pi abhāvattā. The general meaning of the passage is clear. Duṭṭhagāmaṇī will show his superiority without hurting the elephant or his brother. He jumps with his mare over the elephant[1] and launches his javelin above the brother's head, so that it only might cut the skin armour on the elephant's back. This is the signification of the text adopted by myself.

We are, therefore, fully justified in criticizing even the Ṭīkā, and we are indeed able to quote passages, where it appears to be in the wrong, and where the text, upon which it is based, was corrupt. The reading of Ṭ ādāya (36. 96 d) instead of ādiya is not in keeping with the metre. The same is the case with laddhānumatiṃ (37. 9 b), and with punāgamma (22. 40 b). But I believe too that the reading asappayi (21. 20 d) for example, where X Y have samappayi, is certainly wrong. The reading saṃtinta in 29. 11 b and 12 b is good but hardly acceptable, if we compare the MSS., which suggest to us the form saṃnīta. See skr. nī + sam „to mix". Even sīmanto (36. 10 a) cannot be right, as an object of the verb madditvā would be missing in this case. We have to read sīmaṃ so as in X and as in the majority of the Sinhalese MSS. S 5 has the reading sīmanto taken from Ṭ. In 5. 262 a the isolated tadaṅgehi in Ṭ is, perhaps, only miswritten for tadaddhehi (or better tadaḍḍhehi). According to Smp. 311. 8 ff. the wonder is, that only the half of the four objects which serve to mark the boundary, within which the earthquake shall take place, viz. of the chariot, the horse, the man, and the vessel filled with water, should be shaken by the earthquake, whilst the other half, situated beyond the boundary, should remain motionless. The reading of Ṭ would be colourless and insignificant in comparison with that of X Y.[2]

[1] The correction in E 2 is unnecessary. laṅghāpeti does not mean „to cause to jump", but simply „to jump". The instrumental case vaḷavāya is, therefore, quite right.

[2] Smp. 311. 16 ff.: puratthimāya disāya rathassa anto sīmāya ṭhito cakkapādo cali, itaro na cali, evaṃ dakkhiṇapacchimadisāsu assapurisā-

But all such objections to single readings in the Ṭīkā are not able to diminish the high appreciation of its general critical value.

3. The Burmese Manuscripts.

The Burmese recension, as we shall see below (p. XXX), contains a great number of mistakes and clerical errors. Nevertheless there are many passages, where its readings are evidently right. As a rule, it is supported, in such cases, by Ṭ. SNYDER (l. l. p. 27 et seq.) has already collected a good number of such passages: 2. 1 c: kappādismiṃ hi (X Ṭ) in contrast to kappassādimhi (Y); 2. 4 a: Aṅgīraso; 2. 5 c: Accimā cāti; 2. 26 a: Bimbisārā (X and probably Ṭ) instead of Bimbisārassa (Y); 3. 16 c: paṭisaṃkhāraṃ (X Ṭ) instead of paṭisaṃkharanaṃ or °karanaṃ (Y); 3. 39 a: iti saṃjātapāmojjā (X Ṭ) instead of atīva jāta° (S 3, 5, 6)[1]; 5. 18 a: catuvīsa (X Ṭ) instead of catuttiṃsa (Y); 5. 30 a: nitthus' akaṇe (X Ṭ); 5. 81 d: adāsi (X Ṭ) instead of adāpesi (Y); 5. 223 d: saṃghaṃ vyādhiṃ apucchi taṃ (X Ṭ) instead of tassa vy°; 5. 247 b: caturo (X Ṭ) instead of catūhi (Y); 5. 277 d: tathā (X Ṭ) instead of yathā (Y). Other passages, where SNYDER prefers the reading of X, adopted also in my edition, are 5. 224, 5. 225 a, 6. 26 b c (Ṭ probably with X), 10. 33 a (X Ṭ), 10. 92 c (Ṭ deest), 12. 16 d[2], 15. 210 a, 17. 51 d, 18. 21 b, 20. 58 a (taṃ etaṃ).

It is easy to enlarge this list. We may add e. g. 1. 66 d (the corruption was caused by the use of the rare word

[1] X is fully confirmed by Smp. 291. 14 et seq.: saṃgītipariyosāne cassa idaṃ Mahākassapattherena dasabalassa sāsanaṃ pañcavassasahassaparimāṇaṃ kālaṃ pavattanasamatthaṃ kataṃ ti saṃjātappamodā ... ayaṃ mahāpathavī ... kampi ...

[2] The reading yam ettha bhayabheravaṃ is, no doubt, difficult, but not impossible. It would be absolutely unintelligible, how the clear and simple janetuṃ bhayabheravaṃ, if this were the original text, could be altered into that form. But the correction of yam ettha bh° to janetuṃ bh° in conformity with 18 b is easy to understand.

amama, which is commented upon in Ṭ; the pun mama amama corresponds well to Mahānāma's style); 1. 70 cd (the word sabbaṃ in Y is certainly wrong); 1. 83 d (buddhisabbaddhago in lieu of °sabbatthago: the word °addha° is rendered necessary by °go); 3. 12 d (katvāna); 3. 30 d (dhuraṃdhare); 6. 14 b (dakkhiṇaṃsamhi); 6. 45 d (Mahilādīpako); 10. 4 c (tesaṃ instead of vesaṃ); 11. 19 c (aditṭhasahāyassu hi = °hāyā assu hi; assu = skr. āsuṃ); 15. 179 c (Tissārāmaṃ agā thero); 17. 47 c (chijjitvāna); 18. 43 c (dasa manosilālekhā); 22. 5 c (vivaṭe); 22. 40 a (sāsanaṃ datvā); 23. 70 c (vuddhaṃ instead of puttaṃ); 31. 35 b (°bhattādikāni so; the end of the pāda in Y °bhattaṃ hi nekadhā is caused by the end of the preceding hemistich); 33. 95 c (°saṃsagga°); 35. 69 a (Subharājaṃ raṇe hantvā)[1]; 36. 62 d (vasanti rājasantike; the text, as given by Y Z, contains no verb and would require the correction of sādhentā in c to sādhenti, but the name Vijaya was apparently a gloss, which, after having crept into the text, replaced the word vasanti).

I now come to some other passages, where X seems also to contain the correct reading, but which require a few explanatory remarks.

4. 30 cd. The meaning is, no doubt, according to the text of X: the thera did not approve the doctrine of the Vajjiputta monks and rejected those who took their part. The word sissaṃ, contained in Y Z, seems to be an old gloss, as paṇāmayi is the term for dismissing a pupil (M. V. 1. 27. 2). In Ṭ taṃpakkhagāhiṃ is paraphrased by taṃpakkhagāhisissaṃ. It is also possible, therefore, that first in the Archetype of Y by „haplography" the words taṃ pakkhaṃ were lost, and that a later copyist afterwards tried to complete the verse by taking the word sissaṃ directly from Ṭ. In pāda c the reading of Y Z na gaṇhi seems to be better than that of X, and it is also

[1] Y has here the reading Subharājaṅgaṇe or °gaṇo, which would require correcting to Subhaṃ rājaṅgane. X Z have Subharājaṃ raṇe hantvā. Ṭ does not comment on the passage, but the second raṇe in d is paraphrased by tasmiṃ yeva yuddhe „in the same battle". This refers, I think, to a preceding rane in a.

confirmed by Ṭ. But it remains doubtful, if we should read in pāda d °gāhī or °gāhiṃ.

According to the text of X, accepted by me, the pāda d consists of nine syllables. Such pādas, however, are not infrequent in Mahānāma's poem. We have to exclude, of course, the numerous cases, where proper nouns occur, which disturb the metre, or where the metre is put in order by reading a word according to its etymology, as arhanto in lieu of arahanto (14. 14 c), surya for suriya (18. 28 d), arhati for arahati (23. 32 b and d), ratna for ratana (31. 29 a), padmāni for padumāni (27. 34 a). But even without counting such instances we find irregular pādas enough in both the Burmese and Sinhalese recension: 1. 71 c, 5. 23 a, 6. 24 a, 7. 73 d, 10. 30 a, 12. 38 b, 14. 62 c, 18. 31 c and 33 a, 22. 42 c, 31. 70 c &c. These passages show us, that we have no reason to hesitate in sometimes accepting a pāda of nine syllables. Even we may do this, when such a pāda is found in X or in Y alone, but only when it is confirmed by Ṭ. The former is e. g. the case in 30. 66 b; the latter in 1. 37 a, 12. 48 a, 15. 163 c. But when Ṭ agrees with those MSS., which contain the correct pāda, as in 5. 119 c, 6. 13 a, 10. 42 a, &c., we cannot admit the incorrect metre. In the remaining passages, where X differs from Y, and where Ṭ fails us, the supernuminariness of a pāda is, of course, one of the grounds, which must be taken into consideration, but it is by no means a fatal objection to the correctness of the text.

To return, after this short digression, to the enumeration of such passages, where the reading of X recommends itself as the better and more correct.

9. 17. vasāpetvā in Y would be nonsense in this context; kukkuṭayantaka would mean a „cock machine", which is hardly intelligible. X Ṭ have kakkaṭayantaka „crawfish machine". This is a ladder with an apparatus at its upper end like a crawfish's claw, to hook-on to the window. This action is expressed by ḍasāpetvā. Now the succession of actions is in good order. First the prince fastens the ladder (ḍasāpetvā), then he ascends (āruyha), breaks the window (chindayitvāna) and enters into the princess' chamber.

17. 17. We have, without doubt, to read pūjiyantaṃ as in X, S 1, 2, and not pūjayantaṃ as in the remaining Sinhalese Mss. and in the two editions, in order to get a correct construction of the sentence: addasa mahābodhiṃ sālamūlamhi ṭhapitaṃ kattikacchaṇapūjāhi pūjiyantaṃ ca. The literal translation would be „having arrived near Dhammāsoka he saw the great bodhi-tree, which had been placed there at the foot of the (sacred) sāl-tree, and which was just being worshipped (by the king) with festival kattika-celebrations". The situation, however, is not quite clear. Ṭ says: taṃkhaṇaṃ yeva āgammāti, tāvad eva pattacīvaraṃ ādāya vehāsaṃ abbhuggantvā Pāṭaliputtanagaradvāre Dhammāsokassa raññho santikaṃ gantvā ti attho; tadā pana raññā mahābodhito dakkhiṇasākhāmahābodhi āharitvā pācīnamahāsālamūle patiṭṭhāpito hoti, taṃ sāmaṇerena diṭṭhabhāvaṃ dassetuṃ »sālamūlamhi ṭhapitaṃ« ti gāthaṃ āha. The MBv. p. 141 explicitly refers this to the branch of the bodhi-tree sent by Asoka from India to Ceylon: Laṅkānīyamānaṃ mahābodhiṃ kattikachaṇapūjāhi pūjiyamānaṃ[1] disvā. But, according to Mah., Devānaṃpiyatissa sent for the bodhi-tree only after Sumana's return. According to MBv. the succession of the single events would be this: Devānaṃpiyatissa first sends his minister Ariṭṭha to fetch the nun Saṃghamittā from India together with a branch of the sacred tree. After his departure Sumana repairs to Pāṭaliputta to fetch the relics necessary for the Thūpārāma tope, and he arrives there just at the moment described above and in Mah. 18. 64—65.

17. 34. X (and S 1, 2) is all right. One of the two tena signifies „by him", the other „therefore". This is proved too by the paraphrase of the Ṭīkā: tena, tasmā, hatthikkhandhato . . orohanaṃ nāma so na icchi. In the Archetype of Y one tena seems to have been lost, and the copyists afterwards tried to correct the incomplete verse. A similar instance is 30. 52 a b. The double evaṃ caused here the corruption of the text; one of them is omitted in S 3, 4, it is replaced by sabbaṃ in S 5, 6. S 1, 2 take the side of X.

[1] Strong's edition has pūjayantaṃ, but the correct reading pūjiyamānaṃ, which exactly corresponds to pūjiyantaṃ in Mah., is preserved by the Burmese Ms. and quoted in the note.

30. 55 b. X Ṭ have preserved here the rare form karissare. See saṃvasissare in MÜLLER's Simplified Pali Grammar p. 118. The Subject is bhikkhavo, as also in the paraphrase of the passage in Thūp. 64. 12: ito paṭṭhāya na osīdāpessanti. Similarly an older form sakkhisi or sakkhasi = skr. śakṣyasi is preserved by X in 18, 4 a. Y and Z try to correct the form and write sakkosi or sakkhissasi.

34. 79 a b. The text of Y is hardly intelligible, as the subject of akaruṃ is wanting. This subject devā is present in X Ṭ Z. The two pādas are a parenthesis, and we have to translate the stanzas 78, 79 in the following manner: „On the way from the Kadamba river to the Cetiya mountain he caused the ground to be covered with carpets, in order to walk there with clean feet—even the gods might arrange a festival there with dance and music — and at the four gates of the capital he bestowed alms."

In the comparatively rare cases, where the two Burmese MSS. contradict each other, the decision, except when we have to do with simple clerical errors, is not always easy. But we may generally say, that, when the Ṭīkā agrees with one of the two MSS., its reading is probably preferable. This is the case in 18. 9 a. We have to read here as it stands in B 2, Ṭ: Anulādevī sā saddhiṃ pañcakaññāsatehi ca. The corruption to Anulādeviyā saddhiṃ is so easy to understand, that the coincidence of B 1 and Y is merely accidental. Similarly we accept the reading viyogajaṃ* of B 2, Ṭ in 18. 17 d in preference to viyojanaṃ* of B 1, Y. The Ṭīkā agrees with B 2 also in 6. 22 c (ubbāsīyati), 10. 34 c (saṃvibhāgataṃ), and 20. 8 d (pucchitakovidaṃ also in Y), and its reading is, in all these passages, the correct one[1]. After 12. 47 B 1 alone inserts a stanza, which is missing in both B 2, Ṭ and Y. I believe with Snyder, Der Commentar und die Textüberlief. des Mah. p. 20, that it is spurious. The writer of B 1 or of its archetype took it, I think, from Smp. 318. 3—4, of which it is nearly a word for word versification. From the same source a similar stanza is derived, which Moggallāna has inserted into his enlarged Mahāvaṃsa.

[1] In 23. 95 a it is doubtful, if Ṭ agrees with B 2 in reading kedāro. The Ṭīkā has taṃ tena Vasabhena kataṃ khettaṃ Vasabhassa kedāro ti pākaṭo ahosi. But this is a mere paraphrase and it is by no means certain, that kedāro stood in Ṭ's text. I think the more difficult reading dakavāro „dam, bund, tank" is preferable. B 2 has perhaps taken its reading kedāro from the paraphrase in Ṭ.

I finally quote the dubious passage 20. 19 b, where we can hardly come to a conclusive and fully satisfactory result. B 1 has here together with S 3, Z the reading silāyūpassa, B 2 with the remaining Sinhalese MSS. and with Ṭ silāthūpassa. The commentary takes saṃbuddhagīvadhātussa as an adjective compound and joins it with silāthūpassa. Hence the paraphrase saṃbuddhassa gīvadhātunidahitassa silāthūpassāti attho. The „thorax bone relic" was brought from India to Ceylon, as tradition tells us (Mah. 1. 37 et seq.), by the thera Sarabhū immediately after Buddha's demise and was deposited in the Mahiyaṅgaṇa tope. This tope was renewed and enlarged at Devānaṃpiyatissa's time, although not by the king himself, but by his younger brother, and our passage, according to the Ṭīkā, seems to allude to this event. But if we accept this interpretation, the preceding thūpaṭṭhāniyabhūtassa and Mahācetiyaṭhānamhi becomes hardly intelligible. The verses 18 c d and 19 a refer, no doubt, to the erection of a stone pillar, silāthambha or silāyūpa, on the spot, where afterwards the Great tope was built (Mah. 15. 173). I see only one way to remove the difficulty. The word silāthūpassa belongs to thūpaṭṭhāniyabhūtassa as well as to saṃbuddhagīvadhātussa, but in connection with the former word it has the more general meaning „stone monument". In its full extent the sentence would then run thus: pañcamaṃ pana thūpaṭṭhāniyassa silāthūpassa Mahācetiyaṭhānamhi sādhukaṃ patiṭṭhāpanaṃ saṃbuddhagīvadhātussa cāruno silāthūpassa patiṭṭhāpanaṃ ca. On the other hand, if we accept the reading silāyūpassa, the two verses 18 c d and 19 a b are quite clear, and the translation would be „fifthly: the erection (patiṭṭhāpanaṃ) of the beautiful stone pillar, which served the purpose to fix the site of the (future) tope, at the site of the Mahācetiya". In 19 cd patiṭṭhāpanaṃ would have a slightly different meaning, and we should have to translate „and the establishing (i. e. definitive enshrining?) of the Saṃbuddha's thorax bone relic", the word dhātu being used here as elsewhere in the masculine gender. I have written in my edition silāyūpassa, as the construction of the whole sentence becomes less artificial by this reading, and its corruption to silāthūpassa is so easy to explain, that it may have taken place in the copy of the Mah., on which the author of Ṭ has chiefly based his work, even independently from other manuscripts. At all events it is surprising, that in our passage two quite different actions are reckoned as one meritorious work.

False readings occur, frequently enough, in X. Many of them are merely clerical errors, as 3. 9 b mahākhīṇāsavathere (not in keeping with the metre) instead of save vare*, 5. 60 a madhuko instead of madhudo, 5. 118 c pabbajjaṃ upasaṃpadaṃ instead of pabbajja upasaṃpajja, 5. 211 c ākāsi* instead of ākāsaṃ*, easy to be understood through Burmese characters, 5. 257 a namassitvāna instead of nayitvāna, 11. 7 b rājā pitu accayena, not in keeping with the metre, instead of rājāsi pitu accaye, 15. 88 a dhammakaraṇaṃ instead of karakaṃ*, 20. 15 a vassehi instead of vessehi, 22. 41 b samantā instead of vasantā, 25. 69 d amuñcayi instead of avañcayi, 30. 63 b sākhāya instead of sākhāssa = sākhā assa, 34. 42 d mālāguṇopamaṃ instead of guḷopamaṃ*, 37. 23 d tam accayaṃ or khamaccayaṃ instead of mamaccayaṃ &c. This list of passages is, of course, an arbitrary one, but it would be an easy task, to add to it a great number of other examples.

Finally I will quote a passage (19. 32—34), where the decision is very difficult and still open to discussion. I have adopted the text of Y. It is clear and lucid, and does not require any correction. Besides the pun manussindo dumindaṃ suits well Mahānāma's style. The text in X is undoubtedly corrupt. It contains a stanza of six pādas, and the origin of the corruption seems to be connected with the double ṭhānavicakkhaṇo in the first and the fourth line. We may assume a visual error on the part of a copyist, whose eye glanced from the word dovārikaṭṭhāne in 32 to the word pācīnassa vihārassa ṭhāne in 34. As the text thus became incomplete and unintelligible, a writer of one of the archetypes of X filled up the gap, perhaps with the help of the then still existing Aṭṭhakathā.

Nevertheless I have only followed Y with hesitation, owing to the fact, that Ṭ speaks in favour of X. After commenting on the words kulānaṃ rajjam attano the Ṭīkā continues thus: sakarajjaṃ mahābodhiyā dinnattā ca upacārattā ca rājā dovārikaṭṭhāne ṭhatvā tattheva tayo divase mahābodhipūjaṃ kāresīti veditabbo. This looks like a paraphrase of v. 32 according to the Sinhalese recension, but after that sentence Ṭ comments successively on the words dasamiyaṃ, ānayanto, dumindaṃ taṃ, ṭhāne pācīna-m-uttame, and ṭhānavicakkhaṇo, all occurring in the lines 2 to 5 of the Burmese text. We had, therefore, to combine, according to Ṭ, the two recensions in the following way:

Sayaṃ dovārikaṭṭhāne ṭhatvāna divase tayo |
tattheva pūjaṃ kāresi vividhaṃ manujādhipo. ‖
Dasamiyaṃ sukkapakkhe vicāretvāna bhūpati |
ānayanto dumindaṃ taṃ ṭhāne pācīna-m-uttame ‖
ṭhapāpiya mahābodhiṃ rājā ṭhānavicakkhaṇo | pātarāsaṃ pavattesi sasaṃghassa janassa so. ‖

In this case, however, we should have to state the strange coincidence, that in the first stanza X is corrupt, and in the second and third stanza Y, and it would be impossible to find a satisfactory explanation for the corruption either in X or in Y.

If X is wrong, the corruption of the Burmese recension would, at all events, be very old, older even than the commentary. The author of Ṭ found it already in the MSS. which he chiefly used.

4. The Sinhalese Manuscripts.

A glance into the notes of my edition will show us plenty of passages, where all the Sinhalese MSS. (Y) form one group and the two Burmese MSS. (X) the other. I need not enumerate many examples, a few words will suffice. Thus in

7. 17 Y has apassi-m-uttiṇṇapadaṃ. This is an absurdity. Dines Andersen[1] suggests, therefore, the emendation otiṇṇapadaṃ. But X reads apassamuttiṇṇapadaṃ i. e. apassaṃ utt° „not perceiving the footsteps of those who came out from the water" (but only footsteps leading down to the tank), and it continues also passaṃ taṃ ceva tāpasiṃ „perceiving the same devotee". Now the text is clear and does not require any correction.

The two spurious stanzas after 5. 27 are found in all MSS. of the Y-group, whilst they are omitted in X[2]. On the other hand the lacuna in 19. 11 is a mistake found in X alone.

Y has 1. 55 b: cittaṃ pasīdiya, X cittaṃ pasādiya; 1. 70 cd: Y has katvā Jetavanaṃ sabbaṃ gato lokānukampako, X katvā gato Jetavanaṃ sabbalokānukampako; 2. 22 d: Y has so jino, X no jino; 2. 27 b: Y has bodhiṃ patvā, X bodhisatto; 3. 30 d: Y has dhuraṃdharā, X dhuraṃdhare; 4. 64 b: Y has pucchā va, X pacchā va; 5. 72 d: Y has ṭhapesi ca mahājanaṃ, X pavesesi mahājanaṃ; 5. 119 c: Y has piṭakadhārissa, X piṭakaññussa; 5. 135 b: Y has so pasannamano dijo, X so pi attamano dijo; 6. 38 b: Y has dvattiṃsa puttakā, X dvattiṃsa te sutā; 7. 22 d: Y has aññaṃ kiṃci, X kiccaṃ caññaṃ &c. &c.

We conclude from these frequent differences between X and Y, that we have to assume two Archetypes for the Burmese and the Sinhalese recension, which we may call X a 1 and Y a 1. But, on the other hand, we find also very numerous passages, where some of the Sinhalese MSS., especially S 1, 2, 3, have the same text as X, whilst the other MSS. differ from it. We can generally say, that S 1, in spite of its many clerical errors, resembles X the most, next comes S 2, and then S 3. The MSS. S 4, 5, 6 represent the Sinhalese recension in its purest form. We see, moreover, that the two MSS. S 2 and S 3 have been systematically corrected, and that these corrections (S 2^2 and S 3^2) must have been taken from a MS., which was very similar to S 1, although not S 1 itself, so that S 2^2 and S 3^2 have a text, which is again in a closer connection with X than the original text of S 2, 3. We can explain the matter only by the suggestion that the writers of S 1, 2, 3 had at least two MSS. before them, which they copied. One of them contained the Burmese, the other the Sinhalese recension. Both recensions are combined in these three MSS., in S 1 already prima manu in the original text, in S 2 partly in the original text, partly in the corrections, in S 3 chiefly in the corrections, but also often in the original text.[1]

[1] Pāli Reader, part II: Glossary, s. v. uttarati.

[2] Snyder, Der Comm. u. die Textüberlief. des Mah. p. 21.

My hypothesis will first be proved by considering those passages, where more or less verses are missing in some of our MSS., or where two complete parallel texts are found in the two recensions.

1) 5. 5—8. In the MSS. S 3, 4, 5, 6 altogether ten pādas are missing. They are found in X, and also in S 1, which took them from its Burmese original[2]. S 3 omits the ten pādas, following the Sinhalese recension. The text in S 2 is very interesting. The succession of the pādas is here 5 a b c, 8 b c d, 9 a b c, with the same omission as in S 3, 4, 5, 6; then 8 b—9 c are put into brackets, and instead of them the text is given in conformity with X. We see clearly, that the writer first began to copy his Sinhalese original, then, observing the divergence of the Burmese original, he corrected his text according to it. This was done while the MS. was being copied, for the correction is not inserted between the lines, but it stands as part of the context. The ten pādas belong, no doubt, to the original text, and they are also commented upon in the Ṭīkā. Among the Sinhalese MSS., used in the Colombo edition, s 2 alone has preserved them. This MS. s 2 is of a character similar to S 1 (SNYDER, l. l. p. 18, note 1).

[1] From 31. 30 d we may conclude, that the Burmese copy, which the writer of S 1 used, was more similar to B 1 than to B 2. B 1, S 1, 2[2] have in that passage the reading bhavissati, which is a mistake, whilst B 2 (karissati) agrees with the remaining Sinhalese MSS.

[2] The expression „from its original containing the same recension as the Burmese MSS." would be more correct. For we do not know, if the original was written in Burmese characters.

2) 7. 8. A similar observation can be made regarding S 2 as in the passage just spoken of. The pādas ab of that stanza are entirely missing in S 5, 6. In S 4 instead of them there is a hemistich identical with 10 ab. This hemistich seems to have replaced the original verse, already in Ya, whilst the latter has been preserved in X and S 1. I conclude this from the fact, that in S 2 the same hemistich 10 ab follows the stanza 7. But the writer, at once noticing his fault, has put it into brackets again and has copied then the whole stanza 8 from his Burmese MS. The writer of the Archetype of S 5, 6 rightly observed, that the hemistich eko taṃ vāriyanto &c. recurs once more in its correct place, and omitted it altogether. The lacuna in S 3 is still greater, as may be seen from the notes in my edition, but the text has been completed by S 3^2 according to the Burmese recension.

3) 5. 150. The second hemistich is omitted in S 2—6, but found in X and in S 1, and confirmed by Ṭ. In S 2^2 and in S 3^2 it was inserted afterwards. The omission can be easily explained by the end of the two hemistichs ab and cd being identical. To the same fact is due the omission of the two hemistichs 5. 234 cd and 235 ab in X (see p. XIV). S 1 and 2 follow here their Sinhalese source, and the Ṭīkā also comments on the verses, so that the two Burmese MSS. are quite isolated.

4) The most extensive divergence between the Burmese and the Sinhalese recension occurs in the passage 7. 26 et seq. Here again S 1, 2 and s 2 agree with X. S 3 has first the text of Y (see Appendix A) up to Anurādhavhayaṃ va | in its 23rd stanza. Here the leaf kaṃ ends. Then a leaf kaḥ is inserted, containing the text according to the Burmese source, and the leaf kha brings the continuation of the Sinhalese text | raṃ gāmaṃ &c. SNYDER, who has amply discussed the passage (l. l. p. 40 et seq.), is inclined, not without some hesitation, to prefer the text of Y as the original one. But I think, the authority of the Ṭ, which comments upon the Burmese text, and the agreement of S 1, 2 and of s 2 with X are weighty enough to decide in favour of the Burmese version. The Sinhalese text is, in some passages, hopelessly corrupt. I believe that in the Sinh. Archetype Y a 1 was a lacuna, which a copyist tried to fill up with the help of the Ṭīkā according to his rather imperfect knowledge. I may add that Sīhala as a name of the island, as it is used in 22 and 32, never occurs in Mahānāma's whole poem, and that the word pābhataṃ (27) would also be a ἅπαξ λεγόμενον.

5) 10. 57. This stanza is omitted in S 3—6, but it is preserved in X and S 1, 2. To the writer of Ṭ it was also known, for he comments on the word tato in 57 b: tato gaṅgato pāraṃ uttaritvā ti attho. This commentary cannot refer to tato in 58 b. The stanza 57 is, moreover, rendered necessary by tato puna gaṅgaṃ . . samotari in 58 „then the crossed the river once more." The omission of the stanza must be ascribed to the fact, that the ends of 56 and 57 are identical. See SNYDER, l. l. p. 20. In the same manner we have to judge concerning 19. 15, which is again omitted by S 3—6. The stanza is, no doubt, genuine and corresponds to Smp. 338.17 gacchati vata re dasabalassa sarasaraṃsijālaṃ vimuñcamāno mahābodhi. It was also known to the author of Ṭ.

6) 21. 3—4. The Sinhalese MSS. are clearly divided here into three groups. S 1, 2 (and Ṭ) follow the Burmese recension, S 3, 4 omit the six pādas 3 a—d, 4 a b, afterwards added in S 3^2 according to its Burmese source, S 5, 6 fill up the gap by a new stanza. There can be no doubt, that X, S 1, 2, Ṭ are right, the omission again being easily understood by a visual error of a copyist owing to the double Nagaraṅgaṇaṃ in 2 d and 4 b.

7) 34. 14 a b. The hemistich is found in X, S 1, 2 and omitted in S 3—6. In S 3 it was inserted between the lines (S 3^2). As to Ṭ, we cannot positively say that the verse occured in its text. But it is at least probable. We can conclude it from the passage pāpo so upapajjathāti, so pāpo Coranāgo Anulādeviyā dinnaṃ visaṃ khāditvā mato Lokantarikanirayamhi upapanno ahosīti attho. The hemistich is quite indispensable, as without it the agreement of text and verses would be intolerably disturbed. It would, however, be possible to restore this agreement afterwards by retaining after dency to enlarge the text than to shorten it. This is also the reason why the writers of S 1, 2 followed here their Sinhalese source. They intended to hand down the text as complete as possible. But the chief argument, that speaks in favour of X, is the fact, that even the author of the Ṭīkā knew only stanza 191 and ignored the whole passage as in Y. SNYDER, however, says (l. l. p. 24—25) that „the commentary does not bring decisive evidence either in favour of or against the genuineness of the stanzas". But this is certainly wrong. Ṭ comments clearly on the stanza 191. After the dissolution of the compound sayoggabalavāhano it continues thus: uparititthakaṃ[1] ti, Kadambanadiyā uddhaṃ Gaṅgalatitthaṃ samīpaṃ gantvā ti attho; kārayanto ti, sītavaṭṭiṃ dassento; kurumāno ti, karonto; nadiṃ patvā samāpayīti, pubbagataṭṭhānaṃ Gaṅgalatitthaṃ paṭinivatto patvā, pāpuṇitvā; pesesīti vuttaṃ hoti. All the words and phrases occuring here belong to stanza 191, and now Ṭ continues by commenting on raññho dinnāya sītāya at the beginning of 192.

11) 19. 11—12. X omits four pādas, in that it jumps directly from 11 c to 12 c. We can scarcely find a convincing argument against or in favour of their genuineness. I have adopted them in my text, for I have the impression that the detailed description of the single actions connected with the despatch of the sacred tree suits Mahānāma's style very well and that the actions expressed by patiṭṭhāpayi and by āropayitvāna cannot be left out in this desription. The chief difficulty is, that we are not able to make out with certainty, whether the Ṭīkā's author had the four pādas before him or not.

Now the indebtedness of S 1, 2, 3 to a Burmese original is also proved by many single passages and readings.

[1] This is the reading of the Ṭīkā edition, but the MSS. show that we have to correct it to paṭititthakaṃ in full agreement with X. The MS. India Office Library, Pali History 137 (B 2) fol. thaṃ has paṭiṭiṭhakaṃ. See SNYDER, l. l. p. 23, note 1, to which I reply that the word paṭititthakaṃ is by no means an absurdity. It is an adverb and must be translated (ploughing) „in the direction of the ford" (of the Kadamba river).

I shall in this connection omit the readings of S 2^2, 3^2 and speak only of S 1 and of the original text of S 2, 3. We see that S 1 often alone agrees with X, as e. g. 8. 15 d (vaṃsajo paṭṭhapessati against vaṃsajo va ṭhapessati in S 2—6, the former being also confirmed by Ṭ), 10. 88 b (ratikhiḍḍā· in X, S 1 for rattikhiḍḍā· in S 2—6), 15. 36 b (Mahāmucalamālakaṃ in X, S 1, Ṭ for ·nāmakaṃ in S 2—6), 19. 81 c (tassā in X, S 1, Ṭ for tadassā in S 2—6), 24. 16 c (lekhaṃ datvā in X, S 1 for lekhaṃ katvā in S 2—6), 27. 28 d (·pañjarabhūsitā in X, S 1 for ·pañjara and ·pañjaranettavā in S 2—6).

Still more frequently S 1, 2 agree with X. They have 5. 17 b caṇḍakodhavā with X (slight differences in orthography!) for caṇḍakodhasā in S 3—6; 5. 108 b ekadhammo pi with X for ekadhammo hi in S 3—6; 7. 66 b mātā vo with X, Ṭ for mātā te in S 3—6; 10. 28 c Girikaṇḍapabbataṃ with X, Ṭ for Harikaṇḍapabbataṃ in S 3—6; 11. 36 d sakkaritvā ca with X, Ṭ for sakkaritvātha in S 3—6; 20. 40 b gandhapuṇṇaghaṭehi with X, Z for gandhapupphaghaṭehi in S 3—6. It would be easy to multiply the examples ad lib. S 1 and 2 agree with X even in such passages, where X is wrong. Thus 7. 13 d X, S 1, 2 with orthographical differences have āḷhabaddho va so naro, but S 3—6 read aṭṭhā baddho va so naro. Ṭ speaks in favour of the latter reading, and it seems that the variant of X has been taken direct from the old commentary. We read here thus: aṭṭhā baddho va so naro ti, so naro tāya »bho purisa tvaṃ mama bhakkho 'si tiṭṭhā«ti vuttamatto gamanaṃ upacchinditvā ālānakathambhe baddho nāgo va mahāravaṃ ravanto niccalo hutvā aṭṭhāsīti attho. 7. 72 d: S 1, 2 have with X the form abhisiñcayi instead of abhisecayi in S 3—6, and in 25. 69 d the erroneous reading amuñcayi, caused by the frequent phrase tomaraṃ muñcati, instead of avañcayi in S 3—6. Instead of amatosadhaṃ in S 3—6, Ṭ, which is also supported by Smp. and Dīp., S 1, 2, X have 11. 31 d agadosadhaṃ.

In a similar manner as S 1, 2, even S 3 appears to have used a Burmese source besides its Sinhalese original. I quote here a few passages where it agrees with X alone: 2. 31 a, 23. 48 b, 23. 84 b, and a few, where it shares the reading of X with S 1, or with S 2, or with both: 8. 18 c (ñatvā vināsaṃ Sākyānaṃ in X, S 2, 3), 10. 101 d (niganṭhārāmam eva ca in X, S 1, 2, 3 for kārāpesi tatheva ca in S 4, 5, 6, Ṭ), 13. 5 c (tathā tassa in X, S 1, 3 but tathā tattha in S 2, 4, 5, 6), 17. 9 c (āmantayi in X, S 1, 2, 3 but āmantiya in S 4, 5, 6).

I have, moreover, already spoken of two passages (5. 5—8 and 7. 8 ab, see p. XXXIII, XXXIV), where we can observe, how the writer of S 2 during the very act of writing turned from his Sinhalese to his Burmese source. I shall quote some other passages. In 31. 48 b S 4 has a lacuna, jumping from the end of 48 b to that of 50 b. The MS. has, therefore, . . . therassāgamanassito | pahu ayaṃ pi samaṇo &c. The writer of S 2 must have had a Sinhalese original with the same lacuna before him.[1] For he begins with the same mistake as S 4 therassāgamanassito, but he expunges nassito and continues according to the text of X.[1] In 5. 167 b the reading agamāsī taṃ sayaṃ in S 2 is clearly a combination of a Sinhalese source agamā sayaṃ (= S 4, 5, 6) and of a Burmese original agamāsi taṃ. Compare also in 6. 19 b the reading ke nu tumhe ti camūpati with that of S 3—6 ke tumhe ti camūpati and with that of X ke nu tumhe camūpati. In a similar way the writer of S 1 has combined in 5. 275 a the Sinhalese reading saṃghamhi with the Burmese reading saṃkhyamhā to saṃghamhā.[2]

The MSS. S 2, 3, and 6 of the Sinhalese group are, as I have already mentioned, systematically corrected throughout.

[1] The lacuna did not exist in the archetype of Y, as S 5, 6 have the complete text, but with a characteristic mistake. They write āgamanakāraṇaṃ. I am inclined to believe that the writer of their archetype copied this error from the archetype of Y, and that in fact this error was the cause of the lacuna in S 4. The copyist, who wrote the archetype Y a 2 passed by mistake from the na in āgamanakāraṇaṃ to the na of domanassito and omitted thus the four intermediate verses, which may have just filled a line in the original MS.

[2] See also 25. 35 c. S 3, 4, 5, 6 have (with a clerical error in S 4) ti taṃ tosayitvā, X ti tosayitvāna, S 1, 2 ti taṃ tosayitvāna.

The MS. S 6 is no doubt corrected with the help of S 5, and the number of such corrections not taken from S 5, is comparatively small. Vide e. g. 3. 13 b, 5. 47 c, 6. 12 b, 24. 51 c. In these passages S 6^2 mostly agrees with X. On the other hand the corrections in S 6 according to S 5 are exceedingly frequent. It will be sufficient to refer to a few examples. S 5 alone among the Sinhalese MSS. has 2. 29 a the correct patte soḷasame vasse together with X, Ṭ, but S 6 or. with S 1—4 patto. S 6^2 corrects it to patte. In 5. 19 b S 6^2 alters its sataṃ eko ca vīsati to sataṃ eko ca vissutā according to S 5. And in the same way in 10. 54 a, 12. 13 b, 18. 38 a, 19. 58 d and very often. Even false readings in S 5 are often enough adopted by S 6^2 instead of the original correct one, as e. g. 5. 56 b adiṃ instead of S 6 or. adaṃ, or 15. 44 d hetthatanūruhā instead of S 6 or. haṭṭhatanūruhā, or 29. 58 a aṭṭhuttarasate yeva instead of S 6 or. aṭṭhuttarasahassaṃ ca &c. Thus even the conjectures of S 5 have found their way into the MS. S 6.

The MS. S 2 took its corrections from a MS., which was very similar to S 1. Now and then, but rarely, S 2^2 differs from S 1. For instance S 2 or. corrects 5. 253 a mahallakatthe to mahallakattā pi, but S 1 has mahallakanto pi, and 11. 42 d S 2 or. has together with S 1, 4, 6 the mistake janasukhadehisecayī but S 2^2 the correct reading janasukhado 'bhisecayī together with S 3, 5, X. On the other hand, the passages where the corrections in S 2 are identical with the text of S 1 are so numerous and the combination S 1, 2^2 occurs so frequently in the notes of my edition, that it seems to be superfluous to quote examples. It appears, however, that the MS., from which the corrections in S 2 are derived, was free from the many clerical errors and smaller mistakes, which deteriorate so often the text of S 1.

The corrections in S 3 are taken from a MS., which coincided still oftener with the text of the MSS. B 1, 2, than even S 1. This appears from the fact, that very frequently S 3^2 alone among the Sinhalese MSS. has the same reading as our Burmese recension. Thus S 3^2 alone has paññavā 5. 162 d with B 1, all the Sinhalese MSS. read māṇavo; it has with S 1 ganetvā te 10. 11 a together with X (gaṇetvā te) instead of gaṇetvāna in Y, and °gamanā purā 13. 8 d with X instead of °gamane purā in Y. It alone has kim evaṃ 25. 96 d like X, but Y has kim etaṃ, and chattiṃsasatavassāni 27. 6 c with X, but S 1, 2, 3 or., 4, 6 cattālīsasataṃ vassaṃ and S 5 cha cattālīsasataṃ vassaṃ. In S 3 only āhanāpetvā 29. 3 c is corrected to paharāpetvā according to X, and in the same way thūpañ ca 29. 53 a to thūpañ ce and pallaṅke pi anagghake 30. 72 b to pallaṅke koṭiagghake. S 3^2 alone has preserved with X the name Alasanda (Alexandreia) in 29. 39 a. It is remarkable, that S 3^2 has frequently the same reading as s 2; the Burmese original, which the corrector of S 3 used, was undoubtedly very similar to that MS. s 2.[1] Still more frequent than the combination X, S 3^2 is the grouping X, S 1, 2, 3^2 or X, S 1, 2^2, 3^2. It may be sufficient to quote a few examples from the first and from the last chapters of the poem. X, S 1, 2, 3^2 have 6. 22 b paccantagāmakaṃ instead of paccantagāmake in S 3 or., 4, 5, 6; 34. 63 d adā sabbattha instead of adāsi tattha; 36. 85 a taṃ yakkhaṃ instead of taṃ rājā; 37. 5 c yo so sataṃ daṇḍiyo ti rañño daṇḍaṃ ṭhapāpayi instead of rañño daṇḍaṃ ṭhapāpayi yo so sataṃ daṇḍiyo. The other typical combination X, S 1, 2^2, 3^2 is found e. g. in 5. 43 a tadahe va varaṃ instead of tadahe va ca naṃ in S 2 or., 3 or., 4, 5, 6; 35. 109 a gavesāpesi instead of gavesesi; 36. 123 c pekkhanto instead of secanto (S 2 or., 3 or., 4, 5) or semanto (S 6).

Concerning the mutual relation of the Sinhalese MSS., they must be divided into three groups: S 1, 2; —S 3, 4;—S 5, 6.

The close relation of the group S 1, 2 appears from the great number of clerical errors, which are common to both, and which originate from their common archetype. They have both 15. 125 b Kassapā instead of °po, 22. 59 b puttamaṃ instead of puttam uttamaṃ, 25. 86 b bhajo instead of gajo, 31. 45 b °turiyavaraṃ instead of °turiyaravaṃ, 32. 25 c lokakaṃ instead of lekhakaṃ &c. The examples are so frequent[1] that the assumption of an accidental cause is entirely excluded. None of those errors occur in any other MS. S 1, 2 have also often a common reading, which cannot be explained as a clerical mistake. They both read e. g. 7. 65 c dve dārake in lieu of te dārake, 19. 15 d gacchati sāgare in lieu of gacchati vata re, 27. 32 a rattaratana° in lieu of sattaratana° &c. I quote here, of course, only such passages, where S 1, 2 are isolated. Those passages, where they alone among the Sinhalese MSS. agree with X, must be explained otherwise. See above p. XXXIII et seq.

[1] See e. g. 10. 50 c and 56 a, 17. 34 cd, 18. 55 a, 20. 42 d, 21. 34 d, 23. 37 a and 82 b, 28. 25 d, 30. 10 c.

The group S 3, 4 shows its origin from a common archetype especially in the interesting passage 4. 51. The whole stanza is missing in S 5, 6, but it stands in X, S 1, 2. In S 3, 4 only the first four syllables daharenā are preserved, in S 4 a space has been left after them, and S 3 appends the rest of the stanza between the lines. It is clear, that S 3 or., 4 are the copy of an archetype, where the stanza was already fragmentary or perhaps for the most part illegible, and that the text was afterwards corrected in S 3^2 according to the Burmese recension. S 3, 4 have the same lacuna also in 5. 207 c, 20. 32—34, 21. 3, 34. 21 d. See the notes in my edition. Both MSS. have also often the same clerical errors, as 5. 157 c ghātayitvāna instead of ghātayissāmi, 22. 42 c usabhattaṃ instead of usabhamattaṃ, 28. 3 c bhuñjiyitvā instead of bhuñjitvā, 35. 62 c Vasabhattassa instead of Vasabhassa, 35. 74 c gilānabaddha° instead of gilānabhatta°.

As a rule we may say, that S 1, 2 and S 3, 4 stand in closer connection among themselves, than with the third group S 5, 6. S 1—4 have e. g. 9. 26 b the correct reading tuṭṭhā rājasutā ahuṃ in company with X. S 5, 6 have rājaputtā sutā ahuṃ. No doubt sutā was in the archetype of S 5, 6 an emendation of puttā, which afterwards crept into the text and supplanted the word tuṭṭhā. Of a similar kind are the passages 1. 42 d, 5. 63 d, 5. 263 c, 10. 76 a, 15. 49 a, 17. 36 d, 17. 56 c, which have been discussed by SNYDER, l. l. p. 34 et seq.

Yet the matter becomes more complicate with regard to the MS. S 3. I confess, that this MS., owing to its eclectic character, puzzled me more than any other MS. of the three groups, and I by no means pretend, that I have succeeded in clearing up all the difficulties connected with it.

It happens often that S 3 has the correct reading in conformity with X and with S 5, 6, whilst S 1, 2, 4 are faulty. We read 10. 58 d taṃ sametari in S 1, 2, 4, but in S 3, 5, 6, X, Ṭ samotari. S 1, 2, 4 have 35. 82 b the clerical error yo sīpadiya, but S 3, 5, 6, yo pasīdiya; S 1, 2, 4 read 11. 9 c phalaṃ instead of thalaṃ in S 3, 5, 6, X, Ṭ. Similar instances are 5. 218 d (S 1, 2, 4: asādhiko; S 3, 5, 6, X, Ṭ: °dhiyo), 15. 174 c (S 1, 2, 4: Mahindathero; S 3, 5, 6, X: Mahāmahindathero), 18. 57 b (S 1, 2, 4: patiṭṭhiti; S 3, 5, 6, X, Ṭ: patiṭṭhitā), 22. 73 a (S 1, 2, 4: tato jātaṃ sutaṃ; S 3, 5, 6, X: kāle jātaṃ sutaṃ), 27. 12 d (S 1, 2, 4: tato cuto; S 3, 5, 6, X, Ṭ: tato cutā), 35. 46 a (S 1, 2, 4: tassu; S 3, 5, 6, X: tassa).

Sometimes S 3 agrees only with S 5, sometimes only with S 6. S 3, 5, X have 18. 50 c akampi, but S 1, 2, 4, 6 the incorrect akari, S 3 has with S 6 in 5. 203 c the mistake yamahaṃ insteadof samahaṃ (S 1, 2, 4, 5, X, Ṭ), and in 7. 9 b labhetvā instead of laggetvā (thus Ṭ; S 1, 2, 4, 5: lagetvā, X: lagitvā). In 21. 5 c S 3 shares originally the correct text with X, S 1, 2, but alters it afterwards according to the purely conjectural reading of S 5, 6.[1] In the same manner in 27. 10 b S 3 has originally tadālekhaṃ (together with X, S 1, 2, [1] This passage is very interesting. X, S 1, 2, 3 or. have Rahera-kasamīpamhi, S 4 Raherakasmiṃ pamhi. If we transfer the reading of S 4 into Sinhalese characters, it becomes very similar to that of X. It seems, therefore, that S 4 nearly renders the archetype of Y, which was somewhat indistinctly written. S 1, 2, 3 took the correct reading from their Burmese source. But the writer of the archetype of S 5, 6 emended the text of his original to Raherakasmiṃ pabbatamhi, and this conjecture was adopted in S 3^2.

4, Ṭ), but S 3^2 tulyaṃ lekhaṃ (together with S 5, 6), and 34. 28 a °rājassa (X, S 1, 2, 4, Ṭ), but S 3^2 °rajjassa (together with S 5, 6). See also 32. 21 b and 22 c.

We must conclude from all these passages, that the MS. S 3 was more or less, directly or indirectly, influenced by a Sinhalese MS., which was very similar to S 5, 6.

But now we observe, that in some passages S 2 and 4 stand in special connection one with the other. They have, for instance, in 1. 39 d and in 3. 15 a the same clerical errors kārāpetvānakapakkami and vassūpagamatā. In both cases the writer of S 2^2 has afterwards restored the genuine reading by expunging the syllables ka and ma. The same is the case in 5. 123 d, where in S 2, 4 stands tvā instead of ñatvā and in S 2^2 the missing syllable ña has been inserted between the lines. In 1. 75 c the mistake mahārahampi in both MSS. is corrected to mahārahamhi. Mistakes common to S 2 and S 4 are still found in 1. 59 c (tuṭṭho instead of tuṭṭhā), 20. 22 a (okaritvā instead of osaritvā), 22. 82 b (bhāro instead of bhāge), 27. 14 b (yojananuggato instead of yojanuggato), 27. 33 b (suvaṇṇaddhasūriyo instead of suvaṇṇamayasūriyo) &c. This agreement of S 2 and 4 seems to be inconsistent with the fact, that S 1, 2 and S 3, 4 form two separate groups of MSS. But we must bear in mind, that we already came to the conclusion, that these two groups are more closely attached to each other than to S 5, 6. We are therefore justified in assuming a common source of their archetypes, which I may call Ya2, and which was different from the archetype Ya3 of S 5, 6, and from which the two special archetypes of S 1, 2 and S 3, 4, viz. Ya4 and Ya5 originate. By this hypothesis the frequent grouping S 1, 2, 3, 4 opposite to S 5, 6 is sufficiently explained. We must furthermore remember, that S 1 is very often isolated by the carlessness of its writer, that S 1, 2, 3 often follow the text of X, as we have seen above, and that, moreover, S 3 is sometimes influenced by a MS. similar to the group S 5, 6. In such a way we understand, how it may happen, that sometimes S 4 alone or together with S 2 has preserved the text of the archetype Ya1.

I will elucidate this by the passage 23. 93 a b. Here the MSS. are grouped in the following way:

X: dasahi dvādasahi vā vāhitabbe narehi pi,
S 1: dasahi dvādasavassehi vahitabbaṃ nare pi ca,
S 2: dasahi dvādasa vahetabbo narehi pi,
S 3: dasahi dvādasahi vā vahitabbo naro hi pi,
S 4: dasahi dvādasa vahetabbo naro hi pi,
S 5: dasadvādasapurisehi vahitabbe narehi pi,
S 6: dasadvādasapurisehi vahitabbo narehi pi.

It is obvious, that S 2, 4 represent here the text of the archetype Ya1, where the two syllables hi vā were missing. The same lacuna existed in Ya2[1] and in the archetypes of S 1, 2 (Ya4) and of S 3, 4 (Ya5). The writer of the archetype of S 5, 6 (Ya3) filled it up conjecturally, the writer of S 1 did the same, whilst the writer of S 3 adopted the reading of X.

The group S 5, 6 is easy to recognise by a great number of common readings, which are found in no other MS. Snyder, who distinguishes the two MSS. by Q and R, has rightly observed this fact (l. l. p. 33). He compares also S 5, 6 with S 4 (marked P), and arrives at the following result: S 4 (P) is decidedly better than S 5, 6 (Q, R), so that these MSS. cannot be used at all for establishing the text, except in the few cases, where S 4 (P) has a lacuna or a clerical error. I agree on the whole with Snyder's opinion, but I am inclined to attribute rather more authority, than he does, to the MSS. S 5, 6.

The common readings which prove the close connection of S 5 and 6, are of different kind. Many of them must be characterized as mere mistakes, which originate from their common archetype Ya3. We find 5. 181 d in S 5, 6 upahāruṃ instead of upahāraṃ, 15. 189 a ratatṭho instead of rathaṭṭho, 15. 29 d bhavissapi, in both corrected to bhavissati &c. Further examples are quoted above p. XLII. Other readings in S 5, 6 bear the character of conjectures. These MSS.

[1] The assumption of an archetype Ya2 would not be absolutely necessary in our special case. But it is required by other passages, as e. g. 31. 48 b, which was spoken of on p. XXXIX.

have e. g. in the difficult passage 10. 10 two pādas more than the remaining MSS. It appears that the writer of the MS. from which S 5, 6 were copied tried to make the matter clearer by this addition. In a similar manner S 5, 6 alone have two verses instead of the two pādas 21. 4 a b, which apparently were omitted in the common archetype of Y. The intention was, no doubt, to fill up the gap. Mere conjectures are also Anurādhassa instead of Anurādhānaṃ 10. 76 a, acintiyesu instead of acintiye 17. 56 c, disvāna instead of ñatvāna 22. 49 c, tulyaṃ lekhaṃ instead of tadālekhaṃ 27. 10 b, °pañjaranettavā instead of °pañjarabhūsitā 27. 28 d.[1]

But on the other hand S 5, 6 alone among the Sinhalese MSS., share not infrequently the correct reading with X. They have e. g. 4. 58 a preserved with X the word cha before therā, whilst it is omitted in S 1—4; they read 10. 15 c with X nehi in contrast to dehi in S 1—4, gaṅgarājiyaṃ 36. 15 b instead of bhaṅgarājiyaṃ &c. In these cases the Ṭīkā agrees with X, and we may assume with SNYDER, that the writer of the archetype of S 5, 6 corrected the text with the help of the commentary. But there are also passages, where Ṭ is silent and S 5, 6 have, nevertheless, the same good reading as X. In such a case the MSS. seem to have some authority, as they confirm the genuineness of the Burmese text. Thus S 5, 6, X have 11. 30 b gaṅgāsalilaṃ but S 1—4 gatāsalilaṃ, 27. 18 c hiṅgulinā but S 1—4 hiṅgulena, 31. 94 c āruhitvā but S 1—4 āharitvā, 36. 20 a vaḍḍhesi but S 1—4 vassesi or vassehi. In 8. 20 c S 5, 6 read suvaṇṇavaṇṇaitthī and X suvaṇṇamayaitthī, but S 1—4 sabbalakkhaṇasaṃpannā or °puṇṇā. We see, therefore, that the archetype of S 5, 6 had preserved here and there, perhaps under the influence of a Burmese MS., a good and genuine reading, in spite of its numerous corruptions, caused by the writer's tendency to restore at all costs a legible text.

[1] S 2, 3, 4 have only pañjara, S 5, 6 pañjaranettavā. It appears that the archetype Y 1 a had only pañjara, that of S 5, 6 filled the lacuna up by conjecturally adding nettavā. The correct reading was pañjarabhūsitā (X, and accepted by S 1), which is also confirmed by the Thūpavaṃsa.

This tendency is, however, still more noticeable in the MS. S 5. Its writer goes still farther in emending the text. He arbitrarily alters the hemistichs 22. 13 a b, 36. 3 a b, and 24. 8 c d, the latter in order to fill up a gap, existing here in the archetype Y a 1. The verse 10. 53 c d was already discussed on p. XVII. Merely conjectural are the readings rajjum 10. 55 a for rasmim in all other MSS., vuddhim apassiya 1. 57 b for vuddhiṃ ca passiya, Hemavālīti 15. 167 d instead of Hemamālīti, vitthataṃ 17. 31 d instead of vitataṃ, kaṇḍo pi bhūmiyaṃ pati 25. 90 b instead of kaṇḍo papati bhūmiyaṃ.[1] Even aṭṭhaṃsu 19. 58 d, which is grammatically necessary instead of aṭṭhāsi, may be nothing else than a conjecture, but it is a good one, and we can accept it without hesitation. The pāda 24. 48 d agamāsi aññataro, as it runs in all MSS. and in Ṭ, is undoubtedly wrong. S 5 alone has vesen' aññataren' agā. This is also a mere conjecture, though at least as good as that in E 2 agamañññataro viya. But I think we are able to emend our text in a less artificial manner by changing aññātaro to aññātako (metri causa for aññātako) „unknown, in disguise."

The writer of S 5 sometimes, just as the writer of Y a 3, emends the corrupt text with the help of Ṭ. Thus in 5. 19 b S 1—4, 6 have Bindusārasutā āsuṃ sataṃ eko ca vīsati, but S 5 with Ṭ sataṃ eko ca vissutā, and this was also the reading of the Burmese recension. The number 101 is no doubt the correct one according to the tradition, and not 121. This appears from the fact, that Asoka is said to have killed all his 99 brothers (5. 20) except the youngest one, named Tissa, whom he afterwards made viceroy (5. 33). In the same manner S 5 shares the genuine reading with X, Ṭ in 15. 73 d (dakkhiṇaṃ varaṃ in contrast to dakkhiṇaṃ puraṃ in S 1—4, 6), 18. 38 a (yāvasākhucce), 22. 40 (sāsanaṃ datvā instead of sāsanaṃ sutvā).[2] In many passages even S 1 agrees with X, Ṭ, S 5, having taken the right reading from its Bur-

[1] I believe that pañca sīlesu 25. 110 b must also be taken as a mere correction of pañcasīle pi in X, S 1, 2, 4, 6, Ṭ. S 3, however, shares that reading with S 5.

[2] See also 2. 29 a, 5. 37 b, 25. 72 a, 35. 60 b.

mese source (see below sub 6). I quote e. g. 3. 1 b (pañcacattālīsa samāsamo ṭhatvā = samā asamo ṭh° „having lived fourty five years, the incomparable one" in contrast to the absurd samāgamo), 5. 43 d (devatānuggahānugā „accepting the patronage of the devatā" in contrast to devatānuggahāgatā), 8. 13 b (upayantā „approaching the capital" instead of the unintelligible upasantā). In 10. 54 a S 5 quite alone with Ṭ has the reading setaṅgaṃ.

But there remain still some passages, where S 5 without being supported by Ṭ, follows X, differing even from S 6. I refer here once more to 18. 50 c, where S 5 reads with X (and S 3) akampi in contrast to akari in S 1, 2, 4, 6, whilst Ṭ does not exist at all. But one may object, in this case, that akampi is merely an obvious conjecture. In 23. 77 d S 5 has alone with X the form Mahisadoṇika instead of Mahindadoṇika in S 1—4, 6. In Ṭ the name does not occur at all. In 25. 113 b we have bhuñjatha in S 5, B 2 (B 1 miswritten bhujjatha), but bhuñjetha in S 1—4, 6 and in Ṭ; in 6. 15 a S 5 reads sākhante with X, S 1, but S 2, 3, 4, 6 sāmante, the Ṭ commenting only on the word te. S 5 shares the form madhubhaṇḍaṃ (22. 42, 48; 34. 52) with X, whilst Ṭ (p. 313. 19 and 314. 21, 23) seems to read madhuganḍo with S 1, 2, (3), 4, 6, except in 34. 52. In 24. 1 a S 5 has hatthassadhanukammassa like X, but Ṭ hatthassatharu° with S 2, 4, 6 (°taru° in S 1, 3 is a slip).

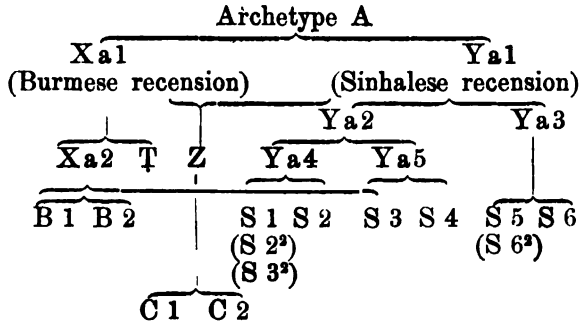
It seems to result from such passages, although they are not frequent nor all of equal weight, that S 5 not only used Ṭ, in order to establish the text, but that it was also influenced to some degree by a MS. containing a text more similar to the Burmese recension. This influence was, however, insignificant in comparison with that exercised on the MSS. S 1, 2, 3.

We may now comprehend our single observations in the following manner:

1. X and Y represent two different recensions of the Mahāvaṃsa text and originate from two distinct archetypes Xa1 and Ya1.

2. The Z recension is a later compilation of an eclectic character, but it more resembles X, than Y.
3. The Ṭīkā was based on MSS. of the X class, but their text was more correct, than that of B 1 and 2 and of their archetype.
4. Y is divided into two groups S 1, 2, 3, 4 and S 5, 6, each originating from a distinct archetype Ya 2 and Ya 3.
5. The group S 1, 2, 3, 4 must again be divided into two groups, S 1, 2 and S 3, 4, with separate archetypes each. Ya 4 and Ya 5.
6. The MSS. S 1, 2, 3 are, in a different degree, influenced by MSS. of the X class. The text in S 1 looks like a real combination of the two recensions.
7. Moreover S 3 shows, in a minor degree, the influence of a MS., similar to S 5, and S 5 itself sometimes that of a MS. which contained a text, resembling to that of X.
8. S 2 and 3 have been corrected according to a MS., similar to S 1, and S 6 according to S 5.

The mutual relation of the different recensions and of the various MSS. may be shown by the following scheme:



The textual tradition of the Mahāvaṃsa is by no means a perfect one. It cannot surprise us, therefore, that there still remain passages enough, where we may doubt either the external form of their text, or the interpretation of their meaning. I shall finally add a few words on some of such passages, which require special notice:

1) 1. 25 a. It seems doubtful, whether we have to read bhayaṭṭitābhayaṃ, as we may suppose from the reading of B 1 and from Ṭ, or bhayaṭṭābhayaṃ with B 2, or bhayaṭṭhābhayaṃ with Y. The first reading would be possible, as we have in Pali the double form aṭṭito and aṭṭo. We find aṭṭito puttasokena Mah. 6. 21 besides bhayaṭṭito Mah. 1. 25 d, Dīp. 1. 66, 2. 23 and 25 &c. See p. 354. Nor would the pāda of nine syllables be a serious argument against it. But, on the other hand, bhayaṭṭitābhayaṃ would be only the result of an emendation of bhayaṭṭitāyaṃ in B 1, whilst the reading of B 2 does not require any correction. The reading of B 1 was perhaps caused by the influence of the word bhayaṭṭite at the end of the stanza. I accept, therefore, the reading of B 2. In the commentary, however, the word bhayaṭṭito does occur, but only in a paraphrase, not in a verbatim quotation from our passage. As to the reading of Y, I believe, that the corruption of the rarer bhayaṭṭo to the obvious but insignificant bhayaṭṭho is quite intellegible. In the same manner we have in 1. 25 d in Y bhayaddite or bhayaṭṭhite instead of bhayaṭṭite, in 1. 59 a bhayaṭṭhe te instead of bhayaṭṭe te, and in 7. 21 c bhayaṭṭhā instead of bhayaṭṭā. In all these passages the reading of X is supported by Ṭ.

2) 1. 50. We have to read either with Y tassa mātā mahāmātu maṇipallaṅkam uttamaṃ datvā kālakatā nāgī, or with X tassa mātāmaho mātu maṇipallaṅkaṃ uttamaṃ datvā kālaṃ akā nāgo or better kālakato nāgo in agreement with Ṭ. The context is this: The Nāga king Mahodara had a younger sister who was married to another Nāga king. Her son was Cūlodara. Now, the author continues according to Y: „to him (Cūlodaro) his mother bestowed the grandmother's invaluable gem-throne and afterwards the Nāgī died". Or according to X: „to his (Cūlodara's) mother the grandfather bestowed his invaluable gem-throne (and not to Mahodara) and afterwards the Nāga died". The fact gave rise to the war between Mahodara and Cūlodara, which was settled by the Buddha. I have followed the text of X, chiefly because it was also the text of Ṭ's original. Ṭ has tassāti, tassa Cūlodarassa mātāmaho, imassa nāgo ti iminā saṃbandho, mātuyā pitā nāgarājā ti vuttaṃ hoti; maṇipallaṅkam uttamaṃ ti, uttamaṃ maṇipallaṅkaṃ mātu datvā kālakato ti, Cūlodarassa mātuyā datvā kālakiriyaṃ kato hotīti attho. But the text of X seems also to be the more reasonable. We exspect indeed, that Cūlodara's grandfather, and not his grandmother, was the gem-throne's proprietor. In this case only we understand Mahodara's claim for the inheritance, as he was his elder son. On the other hand, however, I will not omit to notice the remarkable variant nāgi instead of nāgo in 50 c.

3) 3. 8. The Sinhalese recension is certainly wrong here, and the passage has been totally misunderstood till now. I read saṃbuddhānumatiṃ satiṃ, as we can restore from the readings in B 1 and 2 and in C 1 and 2. We have to take satiṃ as acc. fem. of the pres. part. of root as. The accusative case depends on saraṃ in 7 a and is parallel to muninānuggahaṃ kataṃ. We have to translate „remembering the (really) existing permission of the Buddha to arrange a dhammasaṃgīti". Mahākassapa concludes the Buddha's consent from his admonition to establish the holy doctrine. The reading, accepted by me, was probably also that of Ṭ, where the passage is paraphrased by saṃbuddhassa anumatiṃ vijjamānikaṃ.

4) 5. 108. It is clear, that the second verse of the stanza is influenced by the first verse. The Sinhalese MSS. have in d ekadhammo hi as in b, and in the same way the Burmese MSS. ekadhammo pi in both pādas. We are permitted, I think, to emend the text, or rather to follow the Cambodian recension ekadhammamhi, which has preserved the original text or restored it by conjecture. The literal translation is: „There is one doctrine, which follows on all doctrines, and yet all doctrines become merged in the one doctrine".

5) 5. 130 c d: Y has the following text: (piṭakattayaṃ) uggahetvā va kālena chalabhiññaṃ pāpuṇiṃsu ca, X: uggahesuṃ ussāhena cha 'bhiññā pāpuṇiṃsu ca. Both readings are possible. The Colombo edition adopts the text of Y, but, in order to avoid a pāda of nine syllables, it alters pāpuṇiṃsu to labhiṃsu. The same correction is found in Z. It is, however, not necessary, because such pādas are frequent enough in Mahānāma's poem. But I prefer in d the reading of X, as the change of cha °bhiññā into the common chalabhiññaṃ is more obvious than the opposite change. The ca at the end of d, moreover, speaks in favour of a verbum finitum in c and against uggahetvā. I therefore read uggahesuṃ with X. It seems, that the author of Z had the same idea. For he altered the text to uggahesuṃ ca kālena, and E 2 follows him. But Z, where it is isolated, is by no means a safe basis for the reconstruction of the original text.

6) 5. 224bcd: Y has puradvāresu kāriya ' sudhācitaṃ pokkharaṇiṃ bhesajjānaṃ ca pūriya ‖ (dāpesi . . .), X: puna (or pana) dvāresu bhūpati | kāretvā pokkharañño tā bhesajjānaṃ purāpiya ‖ (dāpesi . . .). Ṭ does not help us. It has only puradvāresūti, nagarassa catusu dvāresu; paripūriyāti (!), telamadhusakkarādippakārānaṃ pūrāpetvā ti attho. It is very difficult to decide for either of the two versions. The pokarañño of X seems to be better, as puradvāresu requires the noun in the plural number. But on the other hand even the reading pokkharaṇiṃ is not at all impossible, in this case the reading of X can be taken as an attempt to make the text easier. The shortening metri causa of pūrāpiya to purāpiya would be no argument, I think, against X.

7) 6. 6 d. The form naṅgulaṃ instead of laṅgulaṃ in X may be a correct dialectic parallel form = skr. lāṅgula. Compare naṅguṭṭhaṃ and naṅgalaṃ. In d we have to read pannakaṇṇako according to X and Ṭ and to translate it „with lowered ears" (Ṭ = patitakaṇṇo). But pattakaṇṇako would also be admissible and would have the same meaning. See Kuhns Zeitschr. f. vgl. Sprachforschung 33, p. 576.

8) 9. 28 a: S 3—6 have Laṅkāpālo Paṇḍuvāsudevo rajjaṃ akārayi | tiṃsa vassāni, X has Laṅkādīpe P. r. ak. | t. v. The reading of S 1, 2 Laṅkādīpo takes a middle way between both texts. As Ṭ has nothing to say on the point we have no criterion in favour of X or Y. The same is the case 14. 2 d, where X has agā so Missakaṃ nagaṃ, Y agamā Miss.

n. It is perhaps allowable to attribute some authority to Z in such doubtful cases. As Z here agrees with Y, I have adopted the reading agamā. Cf. also 14. 5 d, 35. 97 c. In 22. 74 a X, S 1, 2 have bhattappavesamaṅgala°, S 3—6 sitthappavesamaṅgala°. Both readings are admissible, the latter perhaps more significant and therefore preferable.

9) 10. 10. The passage is very difficult. I understand the preceding verse thus: When the young Paṇḍukābhaya was asked by the other boys, where he had hidden, he did not tell them his secret, but he used to deceive them (vañceti) with other i. e. evasive words. Then the poet continues: Now when the men came, who were sent to catch and to kill him, he, putting on his clothes and diving under water, placed himself in the hollow of the tree. See Mahávaṇsa, translated by WIJESINHA p. 39 (with TURNOUR). We have to make our choice of two readings. The original text of Y seems to have been the same as in B 1: manusseh' āgateh' eso . . . ṭhito ahu. This would be a kind of absolute instrumental case, but I do not believe that such a construction is admissible, nor do I think that we are allowed to alter the text to manusses' āgates' eso. We must, therefore, recur to the reading of B 2 and Ṭ manusseh' āgatāhe so = manussehi āgate ahe so according to Ṭ „on the day, when the man approached". This construction is, however, somewhat strange. It can be explained only as analogous to numerous phrases like rājena māpite nagare, hatthinā katamaggena &c. And I may cite the passage 25. 60: ṭhitaṃ Gāmaṇirājena balakoṭṭhaṃ, where the construction is very similar to, although not identical with, the construction of manussehi āgate ahe.

10) 10. 38. Undoubtedly in all the MSS. the text is wrong. I suppose, that in the archetype A stood the erratum tesu taṃ. The writer corrected it by adding sā below or above the line. The copyist of the archetype Xa1 took this syllable sā as a correction of taṃ and not of su and therefore wrote tesu sā. The writer of the archetype Ya1 accepted sā instead of su, but he put it in the wrong place. I propose, therefore, the obvious emendation te sā taṃ. The author of Ṭ was apparently puzzled by the text of his original. We see this clearly from his own words, when he comments upon the passage in question thus: sabbe bhojapayī tesūti, sā te sabbe bhojāpayīti saṃbandho; su-kāro padapūraṇattho, sabbesu bhojāpayī tesūti vā adhikaraṇavacanattho daṭṭhabbo.

11) 10. 89. The names of the single localities are difficult to explain, and even the form of the names is uncertain, as Ṭ is silent in the matter. The name pacchimarājinī seems to mean „the Western Queens"; it is used for the name of the chapel or sanctuary of those goddesses. I think, it is not merely accidental, that the sanctuary of the pacchimarājinī was built pacchimadvāradisābhāge. We do not know anything, however, about the character of those Western Queens, they were perhaps death-goddesses. In 89 d we have to read, I believe, vyādhidevassa tālakaṃ „the sacred palmyra tree of the demon of diseases", but in 95 c the reading āvāsapāliṃ vyādhānaṃ „the row of buildings of the hunters" is confirmed by Ṭ, and in the same way vyādhapāli in 100 b. If we prefer the reading vyādhīnaṃ and vyādhipāli in conformity with the best MSS., we should have to translate the phrase thus: „row of houses for diseases". But in this case we should rather expect vyādhitānaṃ and vyādhita°. The word Yonasabhāgavatthu is exceedingly doubtful. It would mean „common dwelling ground of the Yonas or Greeks". It is not probable, that four centuries B. C., already at Paṇḍukābhaya's time, Greeks had settled in Ceylon, but the building erected by that king may afterwards have served as a dwelling place for foreigners and may have got its name from this fact. The reading Mahej(j)āgharaṃ seems to be certain, if we compare 17. 30, where even Ṭ has Mahejavatthuṃ. Maheja-, however, is understood as the name of a Yakkha: Mahejavatthuṃ ti, idaṃ Mahejanāmakena yakkhena pariggahītaṃ devaṭṭhānaṃ ti daṭṭhabbaṃ. The word „house of the great sacrifice" would at least give sense.

13) 14. 20 d. I prefer the reading of X as the more difficult one. Santi te ñātito bahū must be translated „they (the aññātakā) are still more than the relations". The positive bahū is used for the comparative, as it is also allowed in Sanskrit. This isolated use was the cause of the various corrections in the Sinhalese Manuscripts. The Ṭ does unfortunately not comment upon the phrase, but Smp. 324. 6 aññātakā bhante ñātakehi bahutarā seems to be in favour of the Burmese reading.

In concluding now my work, which has occupied my time for a number of years, I feel its defects better than anybody else can do. We are still far from being able to restore the text of the Mahāvaṃsa in its pure and original form. I am afraid, that we shall never reach this goal at all, owing to the insufficiency of the textual material at hand. A reviewer, who does not judge my work benevolently as a whole, will easily discover many points in the whole arrangement as well as in the single parts, where he may dissent from my opinion, and where he can contradict my statements. But nevertheless I trust, that at all events a good step forward has been made towards that goal. At least my good friends in Ceylon may see, when receiving this book, that I am still devoted with all my old interest to the study of the history of their beautiful island.

I. 292. 12. so tena aṭṭiyati harāyati jigucchati Jāt. II. 143. 16. — See Journ. of the Pali Text Soc. 1886, p. 104—105; 1887, p. 47.

abhiddavati to rush on, to assail, Mah. 6. 5. — balena saddhiṃ caturaṅgikena abhiddavantaṃ (sic!) atibhiṃsanena, Dāṭhāv. 3. 47. Morris, Journ. Pali Text Soc. 1886, p. 136. — Skr. dru + abhi. The verb must not be confounded with abhidhāvati (J. II. 157), as Morris seems to do.

amamo unselfish, free from passion, Mah. 1. 66. — yo vītalobho amamo nirāso, Suttanip. 469, 404. etaṃ pi disvā amamo careyya | bhavesu āsattim akubbamāno, ibid. 777. Cf. ibid. 220. — J. IV. 281, p. 372, where amamassa is explained in the commentary by taṇhādiṭṭhimamattarahitassa. — Skr., P. mamāyati. See Morris, Journ. Pali Text Soc. 1886, p. 148; Fausböll, Sutta-Nipāta, Glossary, p. 34.

āsiṃsati to hope, to wish, to desire. janahitaṃ ās°, Mah. 30. 100. — abbūḷhasallo caraṃ appamatto nāsiṃsati lokaṃ imaṃ paraṃ ca, Suttanip. 779. Cf. Saṃy. Nik. II. 3. 6. 10 (1, p. 62). āsiṃsanti thomayanti, Suttanip. 1046. — āsiṃsanā, āsiṃsitattaṃ, Dhammasaṅgaṇi 1059, 1136 together with words like āsā &c.

unno in pītivegen' unno lit. „overflowed by the stream of joy", Mah. 19. 29. Ṭ paraphrases the word by uggatacitto. — Skr. ud, unna.

upanandhati to bear enmity towards. upanandhi tasmiṃ bhikkhusmiṃ Jeṭṭhātisso, Mah. 36. 117. — so tasmiṃ upanandhi, Cullav. 5. 13. 2; Suttavibh., Pācitt. 36. 1 (Oldenberg, Vinaya Piṭaka IV, p. 83). — See Morris, Journ. Pali Text Soc. 1887, p. 126; Sacred Books of the East XX, p. 100, n. 3.

uposathī, keeping the Uposatha vows, fasting, Mah. 17. 6. — = uposathiko.

ubbāsīyati, to be abandoned by the inhabitants. ubbāsīyati so so ca, yaṃ yaṃ gāmaṃ upeti so (sīho), Mah. 6. 22. Co: chaḍḍīyati. — Pass. of ubbāseti* = skr. udvāsayati, Caus. of vas „to dwell".

kaṅkuṭṭhako, a kind of soil or mould of a golden or silver colour. lākhākaṅkuṭṭhakeh' etaṃ (muddhavediṃ) cittayitvā, Mah. 32. 6. — Skr. kaṅkuṣṭha. Thūp. 77. 20: kukuṭṭhako.

tiṇṇannaṃ, a hybrid form of the Gen. of tayo, made by analogy with pañcannaṃ sattannaṃ &c. Mah. 15. 34, 48. It seems to be obvious to read in 15. 34 tiṇṇaṃ taṃ and to join taṃ with the following bodhirukkhato to a compound = tesaṃ bodhirukkhato. But this is impossible in 15. 48. Ṭ contains also the form tiṇṇannaṃ in its paraphrase idha bhūmiyaṃ mahārāja Kakusandhādīnaṃ tiṇṇannaṃ buddhānaṃ sirīsaudumbaranigrodhasaṃkhātabodhirukkhato tesaṃ tesaṃ dakkhiṇasākhāyo ānetvā imasmiṃ ṭhāne ropitā ahesuṃ (p. 242. 7 et seq.).

dakavāro, irrigation canal, or tank, Mah. 23. 95. — A very doubtful word.

nittamo, free from darkness, luminous, enlightened. Co: nivāritamohatamo. Mah. 30. 100 (epithet of the Buddha). — Cf. skr. nistamaska. Concerning tt = skr. st see p. nittalo = skr. nistala, Kuhn, Beitr. zur Pali-Gramm. p. 53.

pāmaṅgo a kind of ornament, a tie, Mah. 11. 28, among the objects presented by king Asoka to Devānaṃpiyatissa. Co. = ratanapāmaṅgasuttaṃ. — See Cullav. 5. 2. 1, Dīghanik. 1. 1. 10, where *pām occurs in a list of ornaments. Sacr. Books XX, p. 69, n. 2. — tassa (cīvarassa) upari, suvaṇṇapāmaṅgena kusumakalāpaṃ parikkhipanto viya, vijjullatāsirīkaṃ kāyabandhanaṃ bandhitvā, Thūp. 3. 17—19. — suvaṇṇapāmaṅgena pavāḷakalāpaṃ parikkhipanto viya, Mahābodhiv. 62. 10. — Dīp. 12. 1, 17. 83 has sārapāmaṅgaṃ.

pupphādhānaṃ, a ledge (on a Tope) where offerings of flowers are laid down, Mah. 30. 51, 56, 60; 33. 22. — Skr. ādhāna. The reading, however, is uncertain.

madhuganḍo, honey comb, Mah. 22. 42, 48; 34. 52. The word occurs also Ṭ, p. 313. 19, 314. 21. V. l. madhubhaṇḍo.

medavaṇṇapāsāṇā or medavaṇṇ(ak)ā pāsāṇā, stones of the (golden) colour of fat, found in the Himalaya mountains, Mah. 1. 39; 30. 57, 59, 96; 31. 121. The v. l. *meghavaṇṇa occurs only in 30. 57 in Y, in 30. 59 in Y except S 2 or., in 1. 39 in S 1 alone. In 30. 96 and 31. 121, all MSS. of both the Sinhalese and Burmese group have *medavaṇṇa. It is, therefore, without question, that this is the reading, that must be accepted from the standpoint of textual criticism. The r“ would give a good sense, ravibhāsuro in 30. 58. The d 76. 37, but meghavaṇṇa° in however, also confirmed by ṃ. Fausböll does not quote laṅgulaṃ, Mah. 6. 6. — v. l. guṭṭhaṃ.

1. 28. Co: kaṇṇapilandhanaṃ ords occurs also Cullav. 1. 13, mantap. 322. 23 (Oldenberg, avataṃsako Thūp. 17. 23 (an Skr. avataṃsa. See Kuhn, pitthassa saṃnītena rasodake, tāya, Mah. 29. 12. — Skr.

ft occurs Mah. 28. 11; 35. 11. the reading is very doubtful. Sakkhūhi āsi suññato Mah. 37. 7. Samy. Nik. 43. 4,3 (IV, p. 360).

CORRECTIONS.

19. 70: read vidū.

21. 11: the reading of X duve dvādasa vassāni seems to be preferable. . The chronology would be this: Devānaṃpiyatissa 40 years, Uttiya 10 years, Mahāsiva 10 years, Sūratissa 10 years, Sena and Guttika 12 years, Asela 10 years, Eḷāra 40 years = 136 years from Devānaṃpiyatissa to Duṭṭhagāmaṇī. See 27. 6.

33. 8: read Velaṅgaviṭṭhikaṃ.
